RHEE FREES ANTI-RED PRISONERS

Special Term Will Consider Douglas' Move

Motion To Impeach Justice Introduced In House By Wheeler

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Douglas granted an indefinite stay of execution today to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned atom spies, but six hours later Chief Justice Vinson called a special session of the high tribunal to review the order.

Vinson, acting on the request of Attorney General Brownell, announced that a special term of the court will be convened at noon tomorrow. This is 11 hours before the Rosenbergs were scheduled to die in the electric chair at New York's Sing Sing Prison.

The court has been in summer recess since Monday, but Vinson has the authority to convene it if he can muster a quorum of six of the nine justices. Some of the justices, including Douglas, are out of town but six are here or near enough to get to Washington on time.

Would Impeach Douglas

In the explosion of reaction following Douglas' decision, Rep. Wheeler (D-Ga) moved in the House to have Douglas impeached for "high crimes and misdemeanors in office."

The Rosenbergs, center of a world-wide storm of controversy, are in the death house in Sing Sing. They were convicted of betraying some of America's most vital atomic secrets to Soviet Russia.

Douglas said he had serious doubts whether the judge who sentenced the Rosenbergs had the right to impose the death penalty. He said the question should be resolved by the lower courts.

Should the full court, meeting at noon (EDT) or 11 a.m. (EST) overrule Douglas before the hour set for execution of the Rosenbergs, a question arises as to whether the executions could proceed.

Prevailing legal opinion here, necessarily unofficial, was that they could.

"Unprecedented" Action

The reasoning was that if Douglas' stay is vacated by the full court it would be as if no stay had ever been issued. Even if a reversal came after the execution deadline, these authorities reasoned, the couple could be excuted at any time up to midnight Saturday.

This is because U. S. District Judge Irving R. Kaufman of New York set the executions "for the week of June 15," leaving the exact time to Sing Sing's warden.

But if the Rosenbergs were still alive at midnight Saturday, then it was considered that Judge Kaufman would have to resentence them. If Douglas were sustained, the life-or-death question would be

Burning Of Books That Further Red Aims OK'd By Ike

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—President Eisenhower said today that so far as he is concerned the State Department can go ahead and burn any books which openly propagandize for the Communist way of life.

In a news conference statement hailed as "commendable" by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis), Eisenhower said the "no book burning" stand he took at Dartmouth College last Sunday does not apply to books in which Communists openly appeal for people to join them.

Acme Of Silliness

The President said, too, referring to the information libraries this country maintains overseas, that he's against the use of government funds to spread Communist teachings—adding that, in general, he doesn't think such libraries should have Communist works on their shelves.

It would be the acme of silliness, Eisenhower declared, for the United States to be a party to its own self-destruction.

The book-burning question, discussed by the President at length and with some heat, came up after Eisenhower made public a proposed new order which he said was designed to give the people more information about government activities. It would modify a Truman administration order empowering many U. S. agencies to clamp security restrictions on certain information.

Berlin Riots Significant

The President also told his news conference:

1. The riots sweeping East Berlin are significant in that they disprove the Communist myth of general happiness in countries behind the Iron Curtain.

2. He has assured South Korean President Rhee that no sell-out is involved in the armistice terms to which the United Nations have agreed—that South Korea's fears the U. N. has weakened in its determination to halt aggression are completely groundless.

3. The recent Red offensive in Korea demonstrates the Communists' complete indifference to human life.

Bitter Fighting In East Korea Dies Abruptly

No Further Sign Of Any Red Effort To Exploit Bulge

SEOUL, Thursday, June 18 (AP) — The Communists hurled 3,000 troops against Outpost Harry on the Korean Central Front early today but Allied soldiers forced them back after hours of bloody hand-to-hand combat.

SEOUL, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—The explosive 30,000-man Chinese Red offensive in the hills of East-Central Korea broke off abruptly today—timed with reports that truce negotiators at Panmunjom have agreed on a truce cease-fire line.

Only a single patrol clash was reported in the fog-shrouded area early today. From Sunday through Wednesday, the biggest Red drive in two years had flamed there. Throwing in masses of men and their heaviest artillery concentration of the war, the Reds had carved out a two-mile-deep bulge in the Allied main line.

There was no further sign of any Red effort to exploit this bulge despite the fact the Chinese, protected from air attack by rain and fog, have been moving up guns, troops and supplies for three days.

Lull Similar To That In '51

All across the 155-mile front, the unusual lull was similar to that in November of 1951 when fighting died suddenly as truce delegates first agreed on a cease-fire line which later was discarded.

Until Wednesday afternoon, Chinese and South Koreans were locked in fierce combat from Finger Ridge, about five miles southeast of Kumsong, on eastward for 40 miles across the hills to a point near the coast.

Up to 2,000 Chinese struck and hurled back a South Korean coun-

Baruch Asserts Future Of NATO Hinges On Parley

PHILADELPHIA, June 17 (AP)—Elder statesman Bernard Baruch said tonight that the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization hinges on the Big Three meeting later this month at Bermuda and the possible lulling effect of a Korean truce.

Baruch was honored as the "American Citizen of the Year" by the Junior Order, United American Mechanics. The white-haired unofficial advisor to presidents was hailed for his outstanding contributions to the causes of freedom and democracy.

"Whether NATO will be carried through will depend largely on what is done at Bermuda, later this month," he said in a prepared acceptance speech.

Baruch warned that the British, French and U. S. representatives must be able to resist pressures that will be brought to bear should a Korean truce precede the historic get-together of leaders.

"Already, before a truce in Korea seemed likely, pressures for tax reduction and arms cuts were building up. Some government leaders here and abroad had begun to talk of national economy being more important than national security," he said.

Russian Tanks, Troops Crush East Berlin Workers' Revolt

Berlin Rioters Burn Propaganda Booth

A huge crowd in Berlin's Potsdamer Platz on the border between the British and Soviet sectors of the divided capital watches a Communist propaganda booth burn in Red-dominated East Berlin during riots against Communist rule yesterday. Communist forces broke up demonstrations by more than 50,000. Martial law was declared. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Berlin)

Clashes Leave At Least 5 Dead And 150 Injured

BERLIN, Thursday, June 18 (AP) — Sixteen anti-Communists were reported killed by Soviet troops and East German police in yesterday's riots in Russian-occupied East Berlin.

BERLIN, June 17 (AP)—The Russians threw an entire armored division into East Berlin tonight to crush a German workers' rebellion and general strike.

Soviet martial law was backed up with the largest reinforcements of tanks, artillery and infantry ever used to subdue a European city short of war.

The fresh armored division reached the Eastern city limits from zonal bases after a day of street fighting by 50,000 unarmed Germans with a Soviet armored regiment and 10,000 Communist police. five anti-Communists were killed and at least 150 wounded.

The new Soviet force—approximately 10,000 troops with 200 heavy tanks—was rushed up as the anti-Communist strike paralyzed East Berlin.

The Red East German government of Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl appeared helpless in the continuing crisis.

General Strike Spreads

The general strike spread to other Soviet zone cities. State railway workers walked out in sympathy with East Berliners and crippled zonal communications.

Despite the Soviet martial law decree, issued at 1 p.m., violent clashes occurred tonight in Alexander Platz, Potsdamer Platz and Stalin Allee. Russian troops and Communist police fired repeatedly at demonstrators.

Anti-Communists raided an old Communist store at Potsdamer Platz and set it ablaze. They also put Haus Vaterland, a Communist restaurant in the vicinity, to the torch.

The rioters burned police sentry boxes, hauled down Red flags, smashed a dozen government sedans, man-handled German Communist officials and shouted "Ivan go home" in a spontaneous venting of emotions piled up through the postwar years.

Peace Stunt Backfires

A Communist peace offensive stunt had backfired in the Soviet sector of this four-power city, 100 miles deep within the Russian zone. A Communist-run parade of 5,000 workers yesterday, gently.. demanding lighter work schedules already promised by the government, set the stage for the unorganized outburst today.

The railway strike came as thousands of state railway employees walked out in sympathy with anti-Communist East Berlin workers.

The East sector's city officials urgently appealed to the people to "secure the supply of Berliners" and to "start up peaceful, constructive work in your plants." The appeal disclosed Communist anxiety that food and other provisions of East Berlin, which was supplied fully through the Soviet blockade of West Berlin in 1948-49, might soon run out.

Truckloads of extra People's Police were reported on the way to East Berlin from Saxony. Western ter-attack which had advanced 300 yards southeast of Finger Ridge,

Mass Escape May Endanger Korean Truce

Thousands Surge From Four Allied POW Compounds

TOKYO, June 18 (Thursday) (INS) — ROK President Syngman Rhee broke openly with the United States today by turning loose 14,000 anti-Communist prisoners and proving conclusively he will halt at nothing to try to wreck an almost-imminent armistice in Korea.

SEOUL, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—South Korean President Syngman Rhee today formally announced he had ordered the release of anti-Communist North Korean prisoners of war held in U. N. POW camps in South Korea.

"I have ordered on my own responsibility the release of the anti-Communist Korean prisoners this day, June 18, 1953." The President said in a statement.

"The reason why I did this without full consultation with the United Nations Command and other authorities concerned is too obvious to explain.

"The governors and police officers in the various provinces have been instructed to take care of these released war prisoners to their best ability. We trust all our people and our friends will cooperate in this so that there will be no unnecessary misunderstanding anywhere."

MUNSAN, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—Thousands of anti-Communist prisoners of war suddenly surged out of four U. N. Command prison camps in South Korea early today as a truce neared that would place them in custody of a five-nation repatriation commission.

A spokesman at U. N. Command headquarters in Tokyo said it was "definitely a breakout."

The exact total of prisoners free and roaming the countryside was censored from news stories. Newsmen were permitted to say only that "great numbers" of prisoners were outside the compounds.

The effect on armistice negotiations, nearing a climax at Panmunjom, was not immediately clear.

If it was a wholesale escape, as U. N. Command headquarters said, the truce talks might not be seriously hampered.

If it was a large scale release of POWs by South Korean government order, it might pose a threat to the talks.

Reports spread that a cease-fire line for a truce had been agreed upon and that interpreters were giving an armistice text a final going over before the signing, possibly within a week.

Washington sources said the truce line has been settled. Peiping said it happened Wednesday Korean time. Staff officers who had worked long hours over the maps at Panmunjom ended their meetings.

Kaiser Will Tell His Side Of C-119 Cost Comparison

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Henry J. Kaiser asked and got today permission to tell publicly his side of what he termed "grossly misleading" cost comparisons of the C-119 cargo planes his company is building.

Sen. Bridges (R-NH) said both Kaiser and Richard Boutelle, president of Fairchild Engine and Aircraft Corp. of Hagerstown, Md., have been invited to appear Tuesday before a Senate subcommittee investigating aircraft procurement.

Witnesses in the committees's sessions have testified that the big planes cost $265,000 each when built by Fairchild, but the price went up to $1,347,000 each for the ones turned out in Kaiser-Frazer's big willow run plant.

Kaiser called a news conference today to announce his request for a public hearing, to criticize the cost figures, and to countercharge that Fairchild is trying to "undermine and sabotage" Kaiser-Frazer airplane production in order to get another contract of its own.

The prime cost of the C-119 contract, he said, was to tool up the Willow Run plant to provide "preparedness for total war." If that cost could have been spread over an order for 600 of the planes, each would have cost only about $250,000, he asserted.

"We have ample information, and will use it at the proper time," Kaiser said, "that Fairchild recognizes that the C-119 has no future and that Fairchild has the ambition to build the C-123."

A Fairchild spokesman said only that "we have not been asked to build the C-123. We would give serious consideration to any defense department request that we do so."

Ike, Gene Autry Have Something In Common—Golf

WASHINGTON, June 17 (INS)—President Eisenhower and Singing Cowboy Gene Autry found something in common today — golf.

The movie and TV star called at the White House in full western regalia, complete with fancy cowboy boots and a white ten-gallon hat.

Autry said that he and the President, who are both avid golfers, spent most of the time talking about their favorite sport.

Sweeping New Security Order Unveiled By Ike

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — President Eisenhower offered today to "open the door for citizens to obtain more information about their government" through a new system of handling security matters in civilian agencies.

Eisenhower unveiled for inspection and suggestions a proposed executive order sorting the civilian agencies into three groups. The order would deprive 29 of these agencies of any power whatever to put a security label on official information. In 16 other departments and agencies, this power would be limited to the agency heads—they couldn't pass it down the line.

Chiefs of all other agencies and departments would have the right to use the security classification and delegate their authority to do so to subordinates.

For those executives allowed to place a secret stamp on documents, more precise guides than at present would be laid down for them to follow. Representatives of the press were consulted by Attorney General Brownell in drafting the order.

The Eisenhower order would cancel a broader one former President Truman issued on Sept. 25, 1951. The Truman order became the center of a storm of criticism the instant it came to light.

A youthful army doctor diagnosed the illness of a sergeant but pondered what treatment could be given with his limited facilities. He wired the nearest hospital, "Have a case of beriberi. What should I do?"

Clark Declines To Tell Probers About Tax Cases

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark turned down by letter today an invitation to tell a House judiciary subcommittee about cases he handled as attorney general.

Chairman Keating (R-NY) was not immediately available, but it was learned that Clark sent him a letter saying he would not appear because, in his view, an acceptance would involve the independence of the high court.

Subpoena To Be Considered

Rep. Hillings (R-Calif), a member of the subcommittee, called Clark's refusal "unfortunate." He said the group would meet tomorrow to decide whether to subpoena Clark.

The justice, in his letter, gave a brief resume of his activities with regard to seven cases which the committee has investigated. Three of the cases were subjects of investigations by congressional committees during the 80th Congress, he said, and in each case the committee found that he acted in the public interest.

Agreement Under Fire

Another of the cases reportedly involved was a charge that Justice Department officials reached an agreement under which a Minneapolis doctor was permitted to settle for $35,000 a $118,000 government claim for delinquent taxes.

Clark's comment on that case was not disclosed.

Clark said in his letter to Keating that in that case he "made no commitment as to either the criminal or civil liability of the defendant."

Floods Near Clay, W. Va., Kill At Least One, Smash Homes

CLAY, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — A cloudburst sent flood waters rushing down narrow mountain hollows today, smashing houses into kindling wood, destroying livestock and leaving at least one person dead.

The body of Mrs. Anna Summers, an elderly widow whose farm home near here was caught in the path of rampaging Sand Fork Creek, was recovered a quarter of a mile downstream.

Still missing was Sandra Brannon, a 13-year-old visitor to the area from South Charleston, W. Va., about 35 miles southwest.

Her sister Ella, 14, was swept three miles on the angry crest of Big Otter Creek before a man spotted her clinging to a tree and dramatically plunged into the swirling water and swam to her rescue. The hero of the episode was Carl Douglas, a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad worker.

The railroad's line between Charleston and Grafton, W. Va., was blocked by landslides and high water. Bridges were washed out. Highway traffic was snarled.

One farmer reported the loss of 3,500 chickens he had planned to market today. Others told of similar crop losses. Late today damage still was being totaled.

The Brannon sisters were guests in the home of Bernard Postlewait, an uncle, when it was dashed to pieces by surging floods. Postlewaite, his wife, son and another occupant managed to escape by clinging to floating debris or trees in the area.

At least two other homes were smashed and their occupants swept away, escaping death or serious injury in the same manner.

In most spots the waters receded rapidly, leaving behind debris, remains of livestock and the grim job of cleaning up.

Truman Lashes Out At Republican Party

KANSAS CITY, June 17 (AP)—Former President Truman said the Republican party in the last four months "has demonstrated it's the party of special interests."

The former chief executive called reporters to his office in the Federal Reserve Bank Building here for what he termed "just about the first political statement I've made" since leaving office. The statement, made earlier, was released today.

"I've been asked about the condition of the Democratic party," Truman said.

"The Democratic party is, and always has been, a going concern. It's the party of the people, not the party of special interests."

Niece Of Late Treasury Secretary Kills Herself

DOVER PLAINS, N. Y., June 17 (INS)—Mrs. Anne Brooks McAdoo Serge, 51, niece of a former secretary of the treasury, was found dead today, a suicide. She was to have been arraigned today as a ringleader in a tax refund conspiracy.

Dr. Edward L. Cotter, Dutchess County medical examiner, said Mrs. Serge, who was a former chief auditing clerk in the 3rd Internal Revenue district office, had killed herself.

A hole had been punched in the rear window of her car and a hose led from the exhaust pipe through the opening.

164,000,000-1 Coincidence Keeps Czech Out Of U. S.

MONTREAL, Que., June 17 (AP)—The Montreal Star said today police are searching for a young Czech whose plans for getting into the United States with forged papers and a U. S. Army uniform were "wrecked by an improbable 164-million-to-one coincidence."

The paper said the Czech's papers were so good and his plans so perfect that American authorities believe he may have been the product of an agency whose business is to introduce persons into the United States illegally.

The Star gave these details:

The Czech, identified as Adolf Tlamicha, escaped yesterday while U. S. authorities were questioning him. He complained of illness and was allowed to go to a bathroom. He has not been seen since.

Tlamicha received his forged papers and a U. S. Army sergeant's uniform in Paris and spent four months drilling himself on U. S. Army terminology and procedure. Last weekend he boarded a plane in Paris for Montreal under the name of Sgt. John Graham Davis, destination Texas. Speaking perfect English and "GI slang," he sat beside a U. S. Army colonel and the two exchanged Army anecdotes during the trip. But when he stepped up to the immigration desk at Montreal Airport, the U. S. immigration officer looked up and stared.

"What are you doing in that uniform?" the officer asked, and Tlamicha fainted.

The Star said Tlamicha had been an interpreter years ago for the officer, the one person among North America's 164 million who would know him.

There was no further sign of any Red effort to exploit this bulge despite the fact the Chinese, protected from air attack by rain and fog, have been moving up guns, troops and supplies for three days.

Lull Similar To That In '51

All across the 155-mile front, the unusual lull was similar to that in November of 1951 when fighting died suddenly as truce delegates first agreed on a cease-fire line which later was discarded.

Until Wednesday afternoon, Chinese and South Koreans were locked in fierce combat from Finger Ridge, about five miles southeast of Kumsong, on eastward for 40 miles across the hills to a point near the coast.

Up to 2,000 Chinese struck and hurled back a South Korean coun-

Baruch Asserts Future Of NATO Hinges On Parley

PHILADELPHIA, June 17 (AP)—Elder statesman Bernard Baruch said tonight that the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization hinges on the Big Three meeting later this month at Bermuda and the possible lulling effect of a Korean truce.

Baruch was honored as the "American Citizen of the Year" by the Junior Order, United American Mechanics. The white-haired unofficial advisor to presidents was hailed for his outstanding contributions to the causes of freedom and democracy.

"Whether NATO will be carried through will depend largely on what is done at Bermuda, later this month," he said in a prepared acceptance speech.

Baruch warned that the British, French and U. S. representatives must be able to resist pressures that will be brought to bear should a Korean truce precede the historic get-together of leaders.

"Already, before a truce in Korea seemed likely, pressures for tax reduction and arms cuts were building up. Some government leaders here and abroad had begun to talk of national economy being more important than national security," he said.

Kaiser Will Tell His Side Of C-119 Cost Comparison

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Henry J. Kaiser asked and got today permission to tell publicly his side of what he termed "grossly misleading" cost comparisons of the C-119 cargo planes his company is building.

Sen. Bridges (R-NH) said both Kaiser and Richard Boutelle, president of Fairchild Engine and Aircraft Corp. of Hagerstown, Md., have been invited to appear Tuesday before a Senate subcommittee investigating aircraft procurement.

Witnesses in the committees's sessions have testified that the big planes cost $265,000 each when built by Fairchild, but the price went up to $1,347,000 each for the ones turned out in Kaiser-Frazer's big willow run plant.

Kaiser called a news conference today to announce his request for a public hearing, to criticize the cost figures, and to countercharge that Fairchild is trying to "undermine and sabotage" Kaiser-Frazer airplane production in order to get another contract of its own.

The prime cost of the C-119 contract, he said, was to tool up the Willow Run plant to provide "preparedness for total war." If that cost could have been spread over an order for 600 of the planes, each would have cost only about $250,000, he asserted.

"We have ample information, and will use it at the proper time," Kaiser said, "that Fairchild recognizes that the C-119 has no future and that Fairchild has the ambition to build the C-123."

A Fairchild spokesman said only that "we have not been asked to build the C-123. We would give serious consideration to any defense department request that we do so."

Ike, Gene Autry Have Something In Common—Golf

WASHINGTON, June 17 (INS)—President Eisenhower and Singing Cowboy Gene Autry found something in common today — golf.

The movie and TV star called at the White House in full western regalia, complete with fancy cowboy boots and a white ten-gallon hat.

Autry said that he and the President, who are both avid golfers, spent most of the time talking about their favorite sport.

Sweeping New Security Order Unveiled By Ike

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — President Eisenhower offered today to "open the door for citizens to obtain more information about their government" through a new system of handling security matters in civilian agencies.

Eisenhower unveiled for inspection and suggestions a proposed executive order sorting the civilian agencies into three groups. The order would deprive 29 of these agencies of any power whatever to put a security label on official information. In 16 other departments and agencies, this power would be limited to the agency heads—they couldn't pass it down the line.

Chiefs of all other agencies and departments would have the right to use the security classification and delegate their authority to do so to subordinates.

For those executives allowed to place a secret stamp on documents, more precise guides than at present would be laid down for them to follow. Representatives of the press were consulted by Attorney General Brownell in drafting the order.

The Eisenhower order would cancel a broader one former President Truman issued on Sept. 25, 1951. The Truman order became the center of a storm of criticism the instant it came to light.

Today's Chuckle

A youthful army doctor diagnosed the illness of a sergeant but pondered what treatment could be given with his limited facilities. He wired the nearest hospital, "Have a case of beri-beri. What should I do?"

A prankster at the hospital wired back, "Give it to the Marines. They'll drink anything."

Clark Declines To Tell Probers About Tax Cases

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark turned down by letter today an invitation to tell a House judiciary subcommittee about cases he handled as attorney general.

Chairman Keating (R-NY) was not immediately available, but it was learned that Clark sent him a letter saying he would not appear because, in his view, an acceptance would involve the independence of the high court.

Subpoena To Be Considered

Rep. Hillings (R-Calif), a member of the subcommittee, called Clark's refusal "unfortunate." He said the group would meet tomorrow to decide whether to subpoena Clark.

The justice, in his letter, gave a brief resume of his activities with regard to seven cases which the committee has investigated. Three of the cases were subjects of investigations by congressional committees during the 80th Congress, he said, and in each case the committee found that he acted in the public interest.

Agreement Under Fire

Another of the cases reportedly involved was a charge that Justice Department officials reached an agreement under which a Minneapolis doctor was permitted to settle for $35,000 a $118,000 government claim for delinquent taxes.

Clark's comment on that case was not disclosed.

Clark said in his letter to Keating that in that case he "made no commitment as to either the criminal or civil liability of the defendant."

Floods Near Clay, W. Va., Kill At Least One, Smash Homes

CLAY, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — A cloudburst sent flood waters rushing down narrow mountain hollows today, smashing houses into kindling wood, destroying livestock and leaving at least one person dead.

The body of Mrs. Anna Summers, an elderly widow whose farm home near here was caught in the path of rampaging Sand Fork Creek, was recovered a quarter of a mile downstream.

Still missing was Sandra Brannon, a 13-year-old visitor to the area from South Charleston, W. Va., about 35 miles southwest.

Her sister Ella, 14, was swept three miles on the angry crest of Big Otter Creek before a man spotted her clinging to a tree and dramatically plunged into the swirling water and swam to her rescue. The hero of the episode was Carl Douglas, a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad worker.

The railroad's line between Charleston and Grafton, W. Va., was blocked by landslides and high water. Bridges were washed out. Highway traffic was snarled.

One farmer reported the loss of 3,500 chickens he had planned to market today. Others told of similar crop losses. Late today damage still was being totaled.

The Brannon sisters were guests in the home of Bernard Postlewait, an uncle, when it was dashed to pieces by surging floods. Postlewaite, his wife, son and another occupant managed to escape by clinging to floating debris or trees in the area.

At least two other homes were smashed and their occupants swept away, escaping death or serious injury in the same manner.

In most spots the waters receded rapidly, leaving behind debris, remains of livestock and the grim job of cleaning up.

Clashes Leave At Least 5 Dead And 150 Injured

BERLIN, Thursday, June 18 (AP) — Sixteen anti-Communists were reported killed by Soviet troops and East German police in yesterday's riots in Russian-occupied East Berlin.

BERLIN, June 17 (AP)—The Russians threw an entire armored division into East Berlin tonight to crush a German workers' rebellion and general strike.

Soviet martial law was backed up with the largest reinforcements of tanks, artillery and infantry ever used to subdue a European city short of war.

The fresh armored division reached the Eastern city limits from zonal bases after a day of street fighting by 50,000 unarmed Germans with a Soviet armored regiment and 10,000 Communist police. five anti-Communists were killed and at least 150 wounded.

The new Soviet force—approximately 10,000 troops with 200 heavy tanks—was rushed up as the anti-Communist strike paralyzed East Berlin.

The Red East German government of Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl appeared helpless in the continuing crisis.

General Strike Spreads

The general strike spread to other Soviet zone cities. State railway workers walked out in sympathy with East Berliners and crippled zonal communications.

Despite the Soviet martial law decree, issued at 1 p.m., violent clashes occurred tonight in Alexander Platz, Potsdamer Platz and Stalin Allee. Russian troops and Communist police fired repeatedly at demonstrators.

Anti-Communists raided an old Communist store at Potsdamer Platz and set it ablaze. They also put Haus Vaterland, a Communist restaurant in the vicinity, to the torch.

The rioters burned police sentry boxes, hauled down Red flags, smashed a dozen government sedans, man-handled German Communist officials and shouted "Ivan go home" in a spontaneous venting of emotions piled up through the postwar years.

Peace Stunt Backfires

A Communist peace offensive stunt had backfired in the Soviet sector of this four-power city, 100 miles deep within the Russian zone. A Communist-run parade of 5,000 workers yesterday, gently.. demanding lighter work schedules already promised by the government, set the stage for the unorganized outburst today.

The railway strike came as thousands of state railway employees walked out in sympathy with anti-Communist East Berlin workers.

The East sector's city officials urgently appealed to the people to "secure the supply of Berliners" and to "start up peaceful, constructive work in your plants." The appeal disclosed Communist anxiety that food and other provisions of East Berlin, which was supplied fully through the Soviet blockade of West Berlin in 1948-49, might soon run out.

Truckloads of extra People's Police were reported on the way to East Berlin from Saxony. Western ter-attack which had advanced 300 yards southeast of Finger Ridge,

Mass Escape May Endanger Korean Truce

Thousands Surge From Four Allied POW Compounds

TOKYO, June 18 (Thursday) (INS) — ROK President Syngman Rhee broke openly with the United States today by turning loose 14,000 anti-Communist prisoners and proving conclusively he will halt at nothing to try to wreck an almost-imminent armistice in Korea.

SEOUL, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—South Korean President Syngman Rhee today formally announced he had ordered the release of anti-Communist North Korean prisoners of war held in U. N. POW camps in South Korea.

"I have ordered on my own responsibility the release of the anti-Communist Korean prisoners this day, June 18, 1953." The President said in a statement.

"The reason why I did this without full consultation with the United Nations Command and other authorities concerned is too obvious to explain.

"The governors and police officers in the various provinces have been instructed to take care of these released war prisoners to their best ability. We trust all our people and our friends will cooperate in this so that there will be no unnecessary misunderstanding anywhere."

MUNSAN, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—Thousands of anti-Communist prisoners of war suddenly surged out of four U. N. Command prison camps in South Korea early today as a truce neared that would place them in custody of a five-nation repatriation commission.

A spokesman at U. N. Command headquarters in Tokyo said it was "definitely a breakout."

The exact total of prisoners free and roaming the countryside was censored from news stories. Newsmen were permitted to say only that "great numbers" of prisoners were outside the compounds.

The effect on armistice negotiations, nearing a climax at Panmunjom, was not immediately clear.

If it was a wholesale escape, as U. N. Command headquarters said, the truce talks might not be seriously hampered.

If it was a large scale release of POWs by South Korean government order, it might pose a threat to the talks.

Reports spread that a cease-fire line for a truce had been agreed upon and that interpreters were giving an armistice text a final going over before the signing, possibly within a week.

Washington sources said the truce line has been settled. Peiping said it happened Wednesday Korean time. Staff officers who had worked long hours over the maps at Panmunjom ended their meetings.

Truman Lashes Out At Republican Party

KANSAS CITY, June 17 (AP)—Former President Truman said the Republican party in the last four months "has demonstrated it's the party of special interests."

The former chief executive called reporters to his office in the Federal Reserve Bank Building here for what he termed "just about the first political statement I've made" since leaving office. The statement, made earlier, was released today.

"I've been asked about the condition of the Democratic party," Truman said.

"The Democratic party is, and always has been, a going concern. It's the party of the people, not the party of special interests."

Niece Of Late Treasury Secretary Kills Herself

DOVER PLAINS, N. Y., June 17 (INS)—Mrs. Anne Brooks McAdoo Serge, 51, niece of a former secretary of the treasury, was found dead today, a suicide. She was to have been arraigned today as a ringleader in a tax refund conspiracy.

Dr. Edward L. Cotter, Dutchess County medical examiner, said Mrs. Serge, who was a former chief auditing clerk in the 3rd Internal Revenue district office, had killed herself.

A hole had been punched in the rear window of her car and a hose led from the exhaust pipe through the opening.

Miller May Get U. S. Judgeship

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP)—Rep. Miller, four-time Republican Congressman from Maryland's Eastern Shore, made himself available today for a federal judgeship and scoffed at the idea it would result in election of a Democratic replacement.

"If the powers that be select me, I certainly wouldn't turn it down," Miller said of his possible nomination to the U. S. District Court in Baltimore.

"I am proud to have the confidence and support of party leaders, and I believe it is well within the range of possibility that I will be selected."

The probable appointment of Miller to succeed Judge W. Calvin Chesnut, who is retiring June 27, promptly generated political stirring over the resulting vacancy in Congress.

The nine Eastern Shore counties comprising the district are historically Democratic. Miller, first Republican to be elected more than twice, won the fourth time last year without opposition. Democrats virtually concede his invincibility because of his personal popularity.

The 58-year-old Miller belittled the notion he is indispensable to the party.

"The Republicans can't win on the Eastern Shore with just anybody," he conceded, "but if we choose the right person, I feel certain that, with the prevailing pro-Eisenhower sentiment there, we can keep the Shore seat."

Parcel Post Rate Hike Authorized

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—The cost of shipping packages by mail will be raised 36 per cent about Aug. 1, to wipe out one-fourth of a 600 million dollar annual postal deficit.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the boost in parcel post rates today, leaving the effective date to the Post Office Department. Officials there said tentative plans are to make it effective Aug. 1, so that the public may have ample notice of the changes.

The increase is expected to add about 150 million dollars a year to postal revenues. The department's overall deficit for this year is estimated at $594,250,000.

The parcel post rates approved by the ICC today were proposed last year by former Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson. He said he wanted to get the package mail on a self-sustaining basis.

His successor, Arthur E. Summerfield, announced Monday that new rate schedules for other kinds of mail will be proposed to Congress in an effort to slash the deficit further.

D. C. Police Disclose Real Estate Racket

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — A real estate racket that may have involved hundreds of thousands of dollars was disclosed by police today in reporting a search is underway for a salesman who peddled fraudulent second trusts.

John B. Diamond, 3rd, assistant U. S. attorney said the swindle could be one of the largest real estate rackets in Washingon history.

He added that the man—49-year-old salesman for a Washington real estate company—may have obtained from $30,000 to $50,000 from savings of one government worker.

Diamond said the racket involved the sale of false second trust notes on recently purchased property that was encumbered only by a first trust.

He said the missing salesman would draw up and record a second trust note signed with either forged or fictitious names and sell it to an investor at higher than usual interest rates.

Diamond said the salesman would make regular payments on the second trusts, using money obtained from additional worthless trust notes.

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP) — Shirley Hack, 15, and Adeline Krichinsky, 14, were graduated from Baltimore's Clifton Park Junior High School Tuesday night.

The next day, to celebrate, they went swimming in the Baltimore harbor.

Several hours later a police boat had recovered the bodies of both girls.

Jet Crash Is Called 'Calamitous Example'

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—The jet plane crash yesterday near Forestville, Md., was described today by Rep. Fallon (D-Md) as "a calamitous example why civilian and military flying should not be mixed" as proposed at Andrews Air Force Base.

Fallon and the other members of the Maryland congressional delegation are fighting a proposal to use the air base to relieve the overloaded National Airport in suburban Virginia. Instead, they advocate the use of the Friendship International Airport near Baltimore as an auxiliary field.

A tremendous Allied artillery barrage stopped the Reds when they tried to drive on southward.

Eastward across the Pukhan River, the South Koreans stabilized the front where the Communist offensive earlier in the week had hammered out a bulge two miles deep.

On the east flank of the bulge, however, there was savage fighting. South Koreans seized M-1 ridge southwest of Christmas Hill and moved on 400 yards north only to be thrown back to the ridge by a counter-attack.

Less than six hours after Douglas gave the Rosenbergs their fourth reprieve, the Justice Department had its appeal on file with the Supreme Court. The attorney general called Douglas' action "unprecedented." Only last Monday the court refused by a 5 to 4 vote to delay the execution. On the same day it recessed until October.

Brownell asked that the court be recalled to review Douglas' order or to "reconsider and reaffirm" its 5 to 4 vote Monday. Vinson has agreed to follow this procedure, giving attorneys for both sides an opportunity to argue in open court.

Defense Reorganization

Heavy cuts in Air Force appropriations, proposed in the budget for the coming fiscal year as revised by the Eisenhower administration, have stirred a sharp controversy in Congress. Despite Republican demands for economy, the decision to slow down Air Force expansion and lower the ultimate goal from 143 to 120 wings is being contested. President Eisenhower's assurance that the projected cuts will not endanger the country's safety has been disputed by Air Force Chief of Staff Vandenberg, and an effort to restore a large part of the scheduled slash in funds has been promised in the Senate.

Champions of air power and of the threat of long-range retaliatory bombing as a deterrent to atomic attack have been further disturbed by the appointment of Admiral Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Radford, strong proponent of carrier-based aviation, led the so-called admirals' revolt in 1949 against the Air Force program for development of intercontinental bombing capacity. Though he recently indicated a friendlier attitude toward that program, the misgivings have not been dispelled.

When Radford takes over the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in mid-August, all of the present members will have been replaced, and a complete review of the nation's strategic requirements will be undertaken. And by that time a general Defense Department reorganization probably will be well under way.

The current plan for reorganizing the defense setup represents the third step in an evolutionary process of military unification. World War II demonstrated the necessity of unified commands and brought wide agreement that unification should be carried into the underlying structure of the defense organization. General Eisenhower said in 1945 that, if he could have his way, members of different branches of the armed forces would all be put into the same uniform. But interservice rivalries prevented anything like an outright merger of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

The first step toward unification, taken with passage of the National Security Act in 1947, provided for federation rather than consolidation of the services. The new secretary of National Defense was given general co-ordinating powers, but powers not specifically granted to the secretary remained with the separately administered services, and the service secretaries retained the right of direct access to the President and to the director of the Budget. This meant in practice that a service secretary could go over the head of the Defense secretary in seeking a larger share of the total defense budget.

Amendments adopted in 1949 made the service secretaries definitely subordinate to the Defense secretary, who received full powers of "direction, authority, and control" over the whole department. They also created the office of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Unification was further promoted a year later, when the Korean War and a huge increase in military appropriations provided a positive incentive to interservice co-operation and relieved interservice competition for funds.

Conversely, pressure for economy had a part in leading to the current and third step in reorganization. Under the plan to go into effect June 30, unless Congress disapproves, new assistant secretaries of Defense are to take over certain work formerly carried on by departmental boards, and other changes are planned in the interest of greater efficiency. And though channels of authority are to be revised to clarify civilian responsibility, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs is to be given additional powers. The latter change has aroused controversy, for some contend that it will make the chairman too powerful and, in combination with other planned arrangements, virtually nullify other steps intended to strengthen civilian control of the military.

PTO Next?

The United States is linked formally or informally with so many Pacific powers that an all-embracing Pacific Treaty and Pacific Treaty Organization may some day be deemed more logical and useful than the individual pacts. A multi-lateral treaty would be more comprehensive than the alliance with the British for Far Eastern affairs that has been suggested by Senator Taft.

At present, as Taft pointed out, the United States has "treaties with Australia and New Zealand, with Japan and the Philippines, and a very definite understanding with the French in Indo-China." If the present difficulties with President Syngman Rhee get straightened out, there will be also a mutual assistance with South Korea.

The Filipinos proposed a general Pacific defense organization in March 1949. Thereafter Premier Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China visited the Philippines and made a bid for leadership in any non-Communist grouping in the Pacific. Enthusiasm of the Filipinos for the idea lessened after that.

The U. S. pacts with Australia and New Zealand, with the Philippines, and with Japan were pendant products of the Japanese peace treaty negotiated in 1951. Britain has thus far been rebuffed in efforts to get invited to join the ANZUS (Australia, New Zealand, the United States) organization: the Pacific Council.

However, Australia and New Zealand recently agreed, with the assent of Washington, to keep London informed of their defense arrangements with the United States through ANZUS. The two dominions, which do not recognize Communist China, probably come closer to the United States in Far Eastern policies than does Britain, which gave diplomatic recognition to the Chinese Reds.

Rio Grande Dries Up

When the Rio Grande stopped flowing several days ago at Laredo, Texas—only 200 miles from its mouth—it was widely pointed out that this was the first time in recorded history that the historic stream dried up. Unprecedented drought in Texas was blamed.

There is a legend, handed down from generation to generation, that the Rio Grande once ran dry early in the 19th Century. Available records go back only 50 years.

Cities along the Rio which are dependent upon the stream for their water supply have resorted to new supplies from wells. The lower Rio Grande Valley is a vegetable and fruit-growing area, largely dependent upon irrigation. In fact, irrigation may be partly responsible for the drying up of the stream. Mexican farmers also pump water from the stream for irrigation.

But water can be started flowing again in the river only by heavy rains along its watershed. Little rainfall has been recorded in the area for several years.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Rodents As Disease Spreaders

Rodents and insects are always potential threats because they harbor many deadly diseases. These creatures are the natural enemies of man but we usually are able to keep them under control. This is a full time job, however, because they take advantage of the situation whenever we permit our efforts to be distracted by emergencies such as war, floods, fires or explosions.

In previous centuries, when typhus and plague were on the rampage, scientists failed to associate these diseases with rodents, lice, and filth. Typhus is acquired through the bite of a louse, flea, tick, or mite that has been feeding and living on infected rats. As microorganisms go, the causative agent of typhus is classified halfway between ordinary bacteria and viruses. During World War II, typhus was a threat in almost every part of the world where our armies were fighting, indicating that it is by no means extinct. Furthermore, murine typhus exists in the southern part of the United States, which is ample proof that a reservoir of the infection remains in our own country.

The same can be said of plague which also is transmitted to man via fleas that have been living on infected rats or other rodents. Like typhus, this disease has a notorious past and is so frequently associated with the middle ages that many persons think the malady is of no importance today. But it crops up now and then in various parts of the continent. In 1919, California suffered an outbreak of 14 cases; 13 died. Five years later, an epidemic of the same type occurred in Los Angeles. In the first mentioned cases, the disease was traced to infected squirrels; in the second, to rats that had developed plague presumably from squirrels.

Such conditions have a tendency to disappear as civilization advances but we ought to remember that they are never wiped out entirely. Even in normal times they crop out once in a while and in this respect we should insist that our authorities utilize the latest means at hand to eliminate rats and encourage ratproofing.

The ordinary house mouse is not as innocuous as we have been led to believe. It steals our food and contaminates what it does not eat. Like the rat, the mouse attracts mites and fleas which in turn are capable of transmitting certain virus diseases. Rickettsialpox—for example, made its debut in New York City in 1946, with an epidemic of 124 cases. Infected mouse mites were found to be the culprits. No one died but the victims were incapacitated for several weeks with symptoms suggesting the grippe accompanied by a pox-like rash.

Lymphocytic choriomeningitis is another disease transmitted by mice. It occurs periodically throughout the United States. The name suggests brain involvement; within a few days after exposure the sufferer develops fever, headache, and generalized aches and pains. There is mild prostration and most victims think they have the flu. Symptoms subside in two days to two weeks, but within 48 hours there is a relapse with headache, drowsiness, nausea, vomiting, and stiffness of the neck. This "turn for the worse" is more serious and the condition may be mistaken for polio, meningitis, or sleeping sickness; special tests must be done to determine the real cause. Recovery is the rule. Trouble along this line is best avoided by ridding the household of rodents. It is advisable to handle trapped animals with care, lest they be infected.

Vandenberg's Nephew, Now Chief Of Air Force, May Run For Senate; Big Business Wants Continued Government Electric Power

WASHINGTON—Two years ago, silver-thatched Sen. Homer Ferguson, Republican of Michigan, literally begged Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg to run for the Senate against Sen. Blair Moody, Democrat.

He argued that, as the nephew of the late, much-loved Senator Vandenberg, General Vandenberg could easily be elected from Michigan.

The other day when the same General Vandenberg testified in defense of the Air Force, however, Ferguson seemed to have forgotten their former intimate conversation. For he was sharp and critical of the Air Force chief of staff.

Michigan politicos who noted his hostile cross-examination said, however, that Ferguson hadn't forgotten their previous conversation, but rather was fearful Vandenberg might heed his advice—two years late. If so, the general would run against none other than the man who gave him the advice—Senator Ferguson. That's why, they said, the senator was critical in his cross-examination.

NOTE — Vandenberg, who will soon retire from the Air Force, is much more likely to run for the Senate now. However, his decision will depend largely on his health. If he decides to run, the Vandenberg name would be hard to beat in Michigan.

Manufacturers' Protest

When genial Secretary of the Interior Doug McKay said he had received only one complaint from industry regarding the handing of Bonneville Dam power over to the private utilities, he spoke a little too soon. Shortly after making his statement, a formal protest was registered by 12 manufacturing groups, including some of the biggest concerns in the nation.

Though strong believers in private enterprise, they went on record for continued distribution of government power by the government. They opposed turning government power over to the private utilities.

"Our companies," said the industrial group's statement, "have invested over $500,000,000 in the Pacific Northwest, and have provided this region with a new basis for its economy.

"The industrial customers of Bonneville Power Administration, as an organized group, voice most emphatic objection to a proposed power contract between the Bonneville Power Administration and Portland General Electric Co. It is understood that this contract would serve as a pattern for similar contracts with other private utilities.

"The proposed contract represents a departure from the historic policy of Bonneville Power Administration of encouraging the development of industry in the Northwest by direct sale to industrial customers."

In protesting a recent Merry-Go-Round column, Secretary McKay flatly stated that: "The privately owned public utilities will have no right to decide who gets any of the power generated at any of the federal dams, except that which each of them individually resells."

Veto Over Industry

However, the big industrial concerns differed with Secretary McKay and agreed with this writer.

'The proposed utility contract provides, under certain conditions," wrote the big manufacturers, "that Bonneville will not enter into agreement to supply firm power to an industrial customer without the consent of the private utility. The industrial customers of Bonneville Power Administration strongly believe it is contrary to the public interest to grant a veto right over the governments sale of its own power."

This practically paraphrased the Merry-Go-Round column to which Secretary McKay objected, and which stated: "It (the contract) gave private utilities the veto over whether Alcoa, Reynolds, Kaiser et al could expand their factories. If the utilities refused them power, they were out of luck."

NOTE — The companies which signed this protest include the Aluminum Corporation of America, Reynolds Metals, Kaiser Aluminum, American Carborundum Co., Electro-Metallurgical Co., Pacific Carbide, and various others.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Robert A. Taft

The illness of Senator Robert A. Taft leaves his party and the Senate without his objective leadership, which is essential to the conduct of national business. Taft has not only been a capable senator, but his selfless devotion to his country has gained for him a stature unusual in these days of expediency. He has been the leader of the Senate during sessions in which either Republicans or Democrats had the majority because intelligent and patriotic senators recognized his brilliant mind, his tremendous capacity for hard work and his objective morality.

Taft took his defeat at the Chicago convention without resentment. It was difficult for his partisans even to imitate his coldly objective appraisal of that situation. He did question the good taste of the shameless slogan "Thou Shalt Not Steal," a public relations stunt conceived by a vile mind. He insisted, however, that General Eisenhower could not have known that cheap underlings were using such unfair tactics, or he would have stopped them.

After the campaign, he took the position that when a member of a party enters a caucus or a convention, he is automatically bound by its decisions. A believer in political parties, undoubtedly recalling the harm done by the Bull Moose defection in his father's day, he has never respected the mugwump. He delivered almost as many speeches in the campaign as Eisenhower; he traveled throughout the country. His loyalty to his party's candidate came perhaps as a shock to some of the so-called amateurs who then surrounded Eisenhower.

But to the Republican party, Taft's contribution in the 1952 campaign was of paramount importance. The party was split. The opponents of Governor Thomas E. Dewey were so bitter that they planned to sabotage the campaign and the election, not because they were opposed to Eisenhower but because they hated Dewey. Many even spoke of a third party.

Taft threw himself into the campaign with the object of uniting the party. It was not only a matter of speeches; he spoke to individual leaders, to his own partisans. Toward the latter group, he was adamant; one could not be loyal to him and not give Eisenhow- full support. It was a remarkable performance in sportsmanship, rarely witnessed in American politics.

During the pre-convention and campaign periods, Taft was beset by deep personal grief. His wife, Martha, who had long been his political associate and mentor, a woman of ebullient wit, had been struck down by a prolonged illness from which she has never altogether recovered. They had campaigned together during his many years in politics; in 1952, he had to go it alone. Bob never complained, but when, at a little party, he wheeled Martha into the room, among his friends, it was possible to sense how deep was his disappointment.

Bob Taft is a singularly honest man. The truth is so usual to him that friends often worry at his habit of speaking his mind with almost a youthful lack of inhibition. Intellectually objective, he places the facts on the table, as it were, and one has to take them or leave them. He knows no cant and recognizes no need for polite palliation.

After Eisenhower was elected, Bob Taft's only concern was that he should succeed in the Presidency. Impatient of criticism of Eisenhower's inexperience with the intricacies of national civilian administration, he set out to aid the President in every possible way. For 20 years, the Republicans had waited for a Republican President and Taft rejected party differences and party squabbles. Knowing that a political group, long out of power, found it hard to coalesce into a united party, he diligently devoted himself to that task and succeeded beyond expectation. The friendship that developed between Taft and Eisenhower augured well for the Republican party and the country.

His present illness is serious but not fatal and it is to be hoped that when Congress reconvenes in the fall, Taft will be able to lead it to the successful election of 1954. It probably was some satisfaction that he was nicknamed "Mr. Republican." During this past week, he must realize that to the entire Congress, to the men who work with him and know him best, Republican and Democrat alike, he is "The Beloved Senator."

Swift recovery, Bob. The country sorely needs forthright and honest men.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned to death as spies for having stolen atom bomb secrets and given them to Russia, can have their lives spared and their sentences commuted—if they tell the names of their accomplices and give information that will be useful in their arrest.

No formal offer has been made but in indirect ways the fact is known to them that a commutation of sentence will result if the convicted spies reveal the information they possess. Up to now, they have been defiant. As the hour nears for execution of the death sentence, there could be a change in their adamant attitude.

The theory of commutation is this: while the Rosenbergs will be punished by a long-term prison sentence and be eligible for parole in 20 years, the United States would benefit by being able to detect other spies in its midst and particularly to prevent the theft of further information by conspirators—now unknown—who may do even more harm in the future to our national security than has been done already.

Moscow Appears Grateful

From the interest taken in the case by the Soviet government, it is apparent Moscow is grateful for what the Rosenbergs have done. Through Soviet agents all over the world, public pleas for mercy have been stirred up and agitation induced among groups of well-meaning citizens many of whom do not know they are being used as dupes in a world-wide propaganda campaign.

Day in and day out for several weeks now, the "Daily Worker," organ of the Communists in America, has been playing up the Rosenberg case, proclaiming the innocence of both Julius and Ethel and stressing the same note of martyrdom which is often associated with such smokescreens of the true circumstances.

American embassies and legations in different capitals of the world have been picketed, and this has been followed by inspired dispatches telling of the possibly profound adverse effect abroad in the event that the sentences are carried out. Also, the White House has been picketed and every single trick of legal maneuvering has been used and lots of money spent to try to save the lives of the Rosenbergs. How has this money been spent and where did it come from? Some congressional investigating committee might well look into the numerous activities, including the special trains to Washington from New York, which must have been financed by so-called Americans and perhaps by the Soviet's own funds.

The Rosenbergs are guilty of one of the worst crimes in American history. Benedict Arnold's treason, for which he paid the death penalty, was insignificant in comparison to the crime of the Rosenbergs. For they also betrayed their country in wartime—during the year 1944 and since. Much of the evidence is still classified and was impounded by the court. It is important not to let Soviet Russia know just what was recovered out of the papers that were transmitted. The other day Harold Urey, a prominent scientist who wanted the Rosenbergs' sentence commuted, sent a message to the White House claiming that the two accused persons could not have transmitted orally the scientific information they were alleged to possess. But the fact is the information and sketches were on paper, and a spy can act as a courier without being a scientist.

Fuchs Of Less Value

The enormity of the crime has never been publicly disclosed, but it is known that the theft of secrets by Klaus Fuchs, the naturalized Briton who spied and stole atomic data and confessed before being sent to jail in England, is regarded as of far less value to the Russians than the overt acts committed by the Rosenbergs in giving Moscow vital information relating to new bombs. Judge Irving Kaufman of New York, who knows the facts about what the Rosenbergs did steal, expressed himself this way on April 5 last when he pronounced the death sentence:

"Your crime is worse than murder. Plain, deliberate, contemplated murder is dwarfed in magnitude by comparison with the crime you have committed. In committing the act of murder, the criminal kills only his victom. The immediate family is brought to grief and when justice is meted out the chapter is closed. But in your case, I believe your conduct in putting into the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicated Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused the Communist aggression in Korea with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000 Americans and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason . . .

"I feel that I must pass such sentence upon the principals of this diabolical conspiracy to destroy a God-fearing nation, which will demonstate with finality that this nation's security must remain inviolate, that traffic in military secrets, whether prompted by slavish devotion to a foreign ideology or by a desire for monetary gains, must cease."

The Supreme Court of the United States has examined the law and the record and has affirmed the sentence. Only by demonstrating that they will give their allegiance to the United States instead of Russia, which they can do by telling all they know, can the Rosenbergs save their own lives.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH AND STEWART ALSOP

Mr. Facing-Both-Ways

WASHINGTON

According to those who should know, the White House mood is increasingly uncertain and unhappy. The President shows the world a smiling face, but behind the splendidly confident facade there are growing doubts about the course he has charted. The question remains whether Eisenhower's doubts will lead to a change of the Eisenhower course.

The schism in the White House soul was very clearly revealed in the succession of speeches delivered by the President on his triumphal tour of the Midwestern and Eastern states.

On the one hand, at Minneapolis, the President delivered a sustained and closely reasoned attack on the theory of foreign policy (miscalled the "go-it-alone" theory) that Sen. Robert A. Taft has recently been developing. And at Mount Rushmore, he declared that "our foreign aid program as now conceived is indispensible to all our security arrangements" — an obvious and direct hit at the desire of the Taftites in Congress to trim the foreign aid program with a meat axe.

Also at Mount Rushmore, the President pointedly remarked that we must "guard against those who pretend to defend freedom with weapons from the arsenal of the tyrant, for to defend freedom in ways that destroy freedom is suicide." Members of the Eisenhower entourage went out of the way to disclose that this grave warning was aimed at the methods of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. Then at Dartmouth the President nobly denounced the "book burning" that has been started in the American libraries overseas at the behest of the Wisconsin senator.

Political Leadership A Problem

In short, the President made his own position very plain. On the other hand, however, the President equally plainly indicated that he had no plans, as yet, for forcing his party to accept this position of his. At Mount Rushmore, he lauded political "co-operation and harmony," and he argued that he had to get his way by "patient persuasion, friendly contact."

The theme was even more pointedly developed at Oyster Bay. There the President spoke downright defensively about this disinclination to quarrel with the Republicans who differ with him. Evidently the problem of political leadership is very much on Eisen hower's mind. It ought to be.

Only a day or so after the Mount Rushmore speech, Sen. Robert A Taft announced that he would give his strong support to the drive to cut the President's foreign aid program. Sen. Taft explained he had not fought for cuts in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee because "conditions were not right there." He added that the outlook was more favorable in the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is packed with such men as Sens. McCarthy, Mundt and McCarran.

Sen. Taft's characteristically frank declaration of war against the major item of the Eisenhower legislative program, has a meaning that cannot be overlooked. So too, has such an incident as the recent Republican State Convention in Wisconsin, which was little better than an anti - Eisenhower rally.

The hero of the meeting was Sen. McCarthy, whose portrait occupied the place of honor, high above the picture of the President himself. The villian was Wisconsin's senior senator, Alexander Wiley, who has consistently supported the President's policies in his key place as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. The whole meeting almost seemed to be designed to buyy Wiley into taking an anti-Eisenhower stand.

Wiley Supported Ike

More than half the convention delegates refused to rise in greeting to Wiley when he appeared on the platform. Great numbers of them loudly booed him when he was introduced, and there was much booing also at the close of his speech. Another speaker denounced poor Wiley by name for plotting to admit "leftist voters" to this coutry, because he has backed the President's request for revision of the McCarran Immigration Act. And at the close Wiley was formally "censured" by a resolution of the whole convention, for acceding to another Presidential request to oppose the Bricker amendment to the Constitution.

Wiley courageously and correctly reminded the Wisconsin Republicans that their party's main strength was the popularity of Dwight D. Eisenhower. The same point was dramatically demonstrated by the President's expedition to the grassroots. Vast and adoring crowds very plainly showed whom they would follow, if there had to be a choice of Republican leaders.

In these circumstances, it may seem ridiculous that the President's authority in his party, his power to lead and to decide, should be increasingly challenged. Yet the growing boldness of those Republicans who hate and oppose Eisenhower is thoroughly justified in a practical sense. The President has in effect promised his enemies that they can continue to ride on his coattails, no matter how often and how hard they kick him.

Defense Reorganization

Heavy cuts in Air Force appropriations, proposed in the budget for the coming fiscal year as revised by the Eisenhower administration, have stirred a sharp controversy in Congress. Despite Republican demands for economy, the decision to slow down Air Force expansion and lower the ultimate goal from 143 to 120 wings is being contested. President Eisenhower's assurance that the projected cuts will not endanger the country's safety has been disputed by Air Force Chief of Staff Vandenberg, and an effort to restore a large part of the scheduled slash in funds has been promised in the Senate.

Champions of air power and of the threat of long-range retaliatory bombing as a deterrent to atomic attack have been further disturbed by the appointment of Admiral Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Radford, strong proponent of carrier-based aviation, led the so-called admirals' revolt in 1949 against the Air Force program for development of intercontinental bombing capacity. Though he recently indicated a friendlier attitude toward that program, the misgivings have not been dispelled.

When Radford takes over the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in mid-August, all of the present members will have been replaced, and a complete review of the nation's strategic requirements will be undertaken. And by that time a general Defense Department reorganization probably will be well under way.

The current plan for reorganizing the defense setup represents the third step in an evolutionary process of military unification. World War II demonstrated the necessity of unified commands and brought wide agreement that unification should be carried into the underlying structure of the defense organization. General Eisenhower said in 1945 that, if he could have his way, members of different branches of the armed forces would all be put into the same uniform. But interservice rivalries prevented anything like an outright merger of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

The first step toward unification, taken with passage of the National Security Act in 1947, provided for federation rather than consolidation of the services. The new secretary of National Defense was given general co-ordinating powers, but powers not specifically granted to the secretary remained with the separately administered services, and the service secretaries retained the right of direct access to the President and to the director of the Budget. This meant in practice that a service secretary could go over the head of the Defense secretary in seeking a larger share of the total defense budget.

Amendments adopted in 1949 made the service secretaries definitely subordinate to the Defense secretary, who received full powers of "direction, authority, and control" over the whole department. They also created the office of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Unification was further promoted a year later, when the Korean War and a huge increase in military appropriations provided a positive incentive to interservice co-operation and relieved interservice competition for funds.

Conversely, pressure for economy had a part in leading to the current and third step in reorganization. Under the plan to go into effect June 30, unless Congress disapproves, new assistant secretaries of Defense are to take over certain work formerly carried on by departmental boards, and other changes are planned in the interest of greater efficiency. And though channels of authority are to be revised to clarify civilian responsibility, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs is to be given additional powers. The latter change has aroused controversy, for some contend that it will make the chairman too powerful and, in combination with other planned arrangements, virtually nullify other steps intended to strengthen civilian control of the military.

PTO Next?

The United States is linked formally or informally with so many Pacific powers that an all-embracing Pacific Treaty and Pacific Treaty Organization may some day be deemed more logical and useful than the individual pacts. A multi-lateral treaty would be more comprehensive than the alliance with the British for Far Eastern affairs that has been suggested by Senator Taft.

At present, as Taft pointed out, the United States has "treaties with Australia and New Zealand, with Japan and the Philippines, and a very definite understanding with the French in Indo-China." If the present difficulties with President Syngman Rhee get straightened out, there will be also a mutual assistance with South Korea.

The Filipinos proposed a general Pacific defense organization in March 1949. Thereafter Premier Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China visited the Philippines and made a bid for leadership in any non-Communist grouping in the Pacific. Enthusiasm of the Filipinos for the idea lessened after that.

The U. S. pacts with Australia and New Zealand, with the Philippines, and with Japan were pendant products of the Japanese peace treaty negotiated in 1951. Britain has thus far been rebuffed in efforts to get invited to join the ANZUS (Australia, New Zealand, the United States) organization: the Pacific Council.

However, Australia and New Zealand recently agreed, with the assent of Washington, to keep London informed of their defense arrangements with the United States through ANZUS. The two dominions, which do not recognize Communist China, probably come closer to the United States in Far Eastern policies than does Britain, which gave diplomatic recognition to the Chinese Reds.

Rio Grande Dries Up

When the Rio Grande stopped flowing several days ago at Laredo, Texas—only 200 miles from its mouth—it was widely pointed out that this was the first time in recorded history that the historic stream dried up. Unprecedented drought in Texas was blamed.

There is a legend, handed down from generation to generation, that the Rio Grande once ran dry early in the 19th Century. Available records go back only 50 years.

Cities along the Rio which are dependent upon the stream for their water supply have resorted to new supplies from wells. The lower Rio Grande Valley is a vegetable and fruit-growing area, largely dependent upon irrigation. In fact, irrigation may be partly responsible for the drying up of the stream. Mexican farmers also pump water from the stream for irrigation.

But water can be started flowing again in the river only by heavy rains along its watershed. Little rainfall has been recorded in the area for several years.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Rodents As Disease Spreaders

Rodents and insects are always potential threats because they harbor many deadly diseases. These creatures are the natural enemies of man but we usually are able to keep them under control. This is a full time job, however, because they take advantage of the situation whenever we permit our efforts to be distracted by emergencies such as war, floods, fires or explosions.

In previous centuries, when typhus and plague were on the rampage, scientists failed to associate these diseases with rodents, lice, and filth. Typhus is acquired through the bite of a louse, flea, tick, or mite that has been feeding and living on infected rats. As microorganisms go, the causative agent of typhus is classified halfway between ordinary bacteria and viruses. During World War II, typhus was a threat in almost every part of the world where our armies were fighting, indicating that it is by no means extinct. Furthermore, murine typhus exists in the southern part of the United States, which is ample proof that a reservoir of the infection remains in our own country.

The same can be said of plague which also is transmitted to man via fleas that have been living on infected rats or other rodents. Like typhus, this disease has a notorious past and is so frequently associated with the middle ages that many persons think the malady is of no importance today. But it crops up now and then in various parts of the continent. In 1919, California suffered an outbreak of 14 cases; 13 died. Five years later, an epidemic of the same type occurred in Los Angeles. In the first mentioned cases, the disease was traced to infected squirrels; in the second, to rats that had developed plague presumably from squirrels.

Such conditions have a tendency to disappear as civilization advances but we ought to remember that they are never wiped out entirely. Even in normal times they crop out once in a while and in this respect we should insist that our authorities utilize the latest means at hand to eliminate rats and encourage ratproofing.

The ordinary house mouse is not as innocuous as we have been led to believe. It steals our food and contaminates what it does not eat. Like the rat, the mouse attracts mites and fleas which in turn are capable of transmitting certain virus diseases. Rickettsialpox—for example, made its debut in New York City in 1946, with an epidemic of 124 cases. Infected mouse mites were found to be the culprits. No one died but the victims were incapacitated for several weeks with symptoms suggesting the grippe accompanied by a pox-like rash.

Lymphocytic choriomeningitis is another disease transmitted by mice. It occurs periodically throughout the United States. The name suggests brain involvement; within a few days after exposure the sufferer develops fever, headache, and generalized aches and pains. There is mild prostration and most victims think they have the flu. Symptoms subside in two days to two weeks, but within 48 hours there is a relapse with headache, drowsiness, nausea, vomiting, and stiffness of the neck. This "turn for the worse" is more serious and the condition may be mistaken for polio, meningitis, or sleeping sickness; special tests must be done to determine the real cause. Recovery is the rule. Trouble along this line is best avoided by ridding the household of rodents. It is advisable to handle trapped animals with care, lest they be infected.

Vandenberg's Nephew, Now Chief Of Air Force, May Run For Senate; Big Business Wants Continued Government Electric Power

WASHINGTON—Two years ago, silver-thatched Sen. Homer Ferguson, Republican of Michigan, literally begged Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg to run for the Senate against Sen. Blair Moody, Democrat.

He argued that, as the nephew of the late, much-loved Senator Vandenberg, General Vandenberg could easily be elected from Michigan.

The other day when the same General Vandenberg testified in defense of the Air Force, however, Ferguson seemed to have forgotten their former intimate conversation. For he was sharp and critical of the Air Force chief of staff.

Michigan politicos who noted his hostile cross-examination said, however, that Ferguson hadn't forgotten their previous conversation, but rather was fearful Vandenberg might heed his advice—two years late. If so, the general would run against none other than the man who gave him the advice—Senator Ferguson. That's why, they said, the senator was critical in his cross-examination.

NOTE — Vandenberg, who will soon retire from the Air Force, is much more likely to run for the Senate now. However, his decision will depend largely on his health. If he decides to run, the Vandenberg name would be hard to beat in Michigan.

Manufacturers' Protest

When genial Secretary of the Interior Doug McKay said he had received only one complaint from industry regarding the handing of Bonneville Dam power over to the private utilities, he spoke a little too soon. Shortly after making his statement, a formal protest was registered by 12 manufacturing groups, including some of the biggest concerns in the nation.

Though strong believers in private enterprise, they went on record for continued distribution of government power by the government. They opposed turning government power over to the private utilities.

"Our companies," said the industrial group's statement, "have invested over $500,000,000 in the Pacific Northwest, and have provided this region with a new basis for its economy.

"The industrial customers of Bonneville Power Administration, as an organized group, voice most emphatic objection to a proposed power contract between the Bonneville Power Administration and Portland General Electric Co. It is understood that this contract would serve as a pattern for similar contracts with other private utilities.

"The proposed contract represents a departure from the historic policy of Bonneville Power Administration of encouraging the development of industry in the Northwest by direct sale to industrial customers."

In protesting a recent Merry-Go-Round column, Secretary McKay flatly stated that: "The privately owned public utilities will have no right to decide who gets any of the power generated at any of the federal dams, except that which each of them individually resells."

Veto Over Industry

However, the big industrial concerns differed with Secretary McKay and agreed with this writer.

'The proposed utility contract provides, under certain conditions," wrote the big manufacturers, "that Bonneville will not enter into agreement to supply firm power to an industrial customer without the consent of the private utility. The industrial customers of Bonneville Power Administration strongly believe it is contrary to the public interest to grant a veto right over the governments sale of its own power."

This practically paraphrased the Merry-Go-Round column to which Secretary McKay objected, and which stated: "It (the contract) gave private utilities the veto over whether Alcoa, Reynolds, Kaiser et al could expand their factories. If the utilities refused them power, they were out of luck."

NOTE — The companies which signed this protest include the Aluminum Corporation of America, Reynolds Metals, Kaiser Aluminum, American Carborundum Co., Electro-Metallurgical Co., Pacific Carbide, and various others.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Robert A. Taft

The illness of Senator Robert A. Taft leaves his party and the Senate without his objective leadership, which is essential to the conduct of national business. Taft has not only been a capable senator, but his selfless devotion to his country has gained for him a stature unusual in these days of expediency. He has been the leader of the Senate during sessions in which either Republicans or Democrats had the majority because intelligent and patriotic senators recognized his brilliant mind, his tremendous capacity for hard work and his objective morality.

Taft took his defeat at the Chicago convention without resentment. It was difficult for his partisans even to imitate his coldly objective appraisal of that situation. He did question the good taste of the shameless slogan "Thou Shalt Not Steal," a public relations stunt conceived by a vile mind. He insisted, however, that General Eisenhower could not have known that cheap underlings were using such unfair tactics, or he would have stopped them.

After the campaign, he took the position that when a member of a party enters a caucus or a convention, he is automatically bound by its decisions. A believer in political parties, undoubtedly recalling the harm done by the Bull Moose defection in his father's day, he has never respected the mugwump. He delivered almost as many speeches in the campaign as Eisenhower; he traveled throughout the country. His loyalty to his party's candidate came perhaps as a shock to some of the so-called amateurs who then surrounded Eisenhower.

But to the Republican party, Taft's contribution in the 1952 campaign was of paramount importance. The party was split. The opponents of Governor Thomas E. Dewey were so bitter that they planned to sabotage the campaign and the election, not because they were opposed to Eisenhower but because they hated Dewey. Many even spoke of a third party.

Taft threw himself into the campaign with the object of uniting the party. It was not only a matter of speeches; he spoke to individual leaders, to his own partisans. Toward the latter group, he was adamant; one could not be loyal to him and not give Eisenhow- full support. It was a remarkable performance in sportsmanship, rarely witnessed in American politics.

During the pre-convention and campaign periods, Taft was beset by deep personal grief. His wife, Martha, who had long been his political associate and mentor, a woman of ebullient wit, had been struck down by a prolonged illness from which she has never altogether recovered. They had campaigned together during his many years in politics; in 1952, he had to go it alone. Bob never complained, but when, at a little party, he wheeled Martha into the room, among his friends, it was possible to sense how deep was his disappointment.

Bob Taft is a singularly honest man. The truth is so usual to him that friends often worry at his habit of speaking his mind with almost a youthful lack of inhibition. Intellectually objective, he places the facts on the table, as it were, and one has to take them or leave them. He knows no cant and recognizes no need for polite palliation.

After Eisenhower was elected, Bob Taft's only concern was that he should succeed in the Presidency. Impatient of criticism of Eisenhower's inexperience with the intricacies of national civilian administration, he set out to aid the President in every possible way. For 20 years, the Republicans had waited for a Republican President and Taft rejected party differences and party squabbles. Knowing that a political group, long out of power, found it hard to coalesce into a united party, he diligently devoted himself to that task and succeeded beyond expectation. The friendship that developed between Taft and Eisenhower augured well for the Republican party and the country.

His present illness is serious but not fatal and it is to be hoped that when Congress reconvenes in the fall, Taft will be able to lead it to the successful election of 1954. It probably was some satisfaction that he was nicknamed "Mr. Republican." During this past week, he must realize that to the entire Congress, to the men who work with him and know him best, Republican and Democrat alike, he is "The Beloved Senator."

Swift recovery, Bob. The country sorely needs forthright and honest men.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned to death as spies for having stolen atom bomb secrets and given them to Russia, can have their lives spared and their sentences commuted—if they tell the names of their accomplices and give information that will be useful in their arrest.

No formal offer has been made but in indirect ways the fact is known to them that a commutation of sentence will result if the convicted spies reveal the information they possess. Up to now, they have been defiant. As the hour nears for execution of the death sentence, there could be a change in their adamant attitude.

The theory of commutation is this: while the Rosenbergs will be punished by a long-term prison sentence and be eligible for parole in 20 years, the United States would benefit by being able to detect other spies in its midst and particularly to prevent the theft of further information by conspirators—now unknown—who may do even more harm in the future to our national security than has been done already.

Moscow Appears Grateful

From the interest taken in the case by the Soviet government, it is apparent Moscow is grateful for what the Rosenbergs have done. Through Soviet agents all over the world, public pleas for mercy have been stirred up and agitation induced among groups of well-meaning citizens many of whom do not know they are being used as dupes in a world-wide propaganda campaign.

Day in and day out for several weeks now, the "Daily Worker," organ of the Communists in America, has been playing up the Rosenberg case, proclaiming the innocence of both Julius and Ethel and stressing the same note of martyrdom which is often associated with such smokescreens of the true circumstances.

American embassies and legations in different capitals of the world have been picketed, and this has been followed by inspired dispatches telling of the possibly profound adverse effect abroad in the event that the sentences are carried out. Also, the White House has been picketed and every single trick of legal maneuvering has been used and lots of money spent to try to save the lives of the Rosenbergs. How has this money been spent and where did it come from? Some congressional investigating committee might well look into the numerous activities, including the special trains to Washington from New York, which must have been financed by so-called Americans and perhaps by the Soviet's own funds.

The Rosenbergs are guilty of one of the worst crimes in American history. Benedict Arnold's treason, for which he paid the death penalty, was insignificant in comparison to the crime of the Rosenbergs. For they also betrayed their country in wartime—during the year 1944 and since. Much of the evidence is still classified and was impounded by the court. It is important not to let Soviet Russia know just what was recovered out of the papers that were transmitted. The other day Harold Urey, a prominent scientist who wanted the Rosenbergs' sentence commuted, sent a message to the White House claiming that the two accused persons could not have transmitted orally the scientific information they were alleged to possess. But the fact is the information and sketches were on paper, and a spy can act as a courier without being a scientist.

Fuchs Of Less Value

The enormity of the crime has never been publicly disclosed, but it is known that the theft of secrets by Klaus Fuchs, the naturalized Briton who spied and stole atomic data and confessed before being sent to jail in England, is regarded as of far less value to the Russians than the overt acts committed by the Rosenbergs in giving Moscow vital information relating to new bombs. Judge Irving Kaufman of New York, who knows the facts about what the Rosenbergs did steal, expressed himself this way on April 5 last when he pronounced the death sentence:

"Your crime is worse than murder. Plain, deliberate, contemplated murder is dwarfed in magnitude by comparison with the crime you have committed. In committing the act of murder, the criminal kills only his victom. The immediate family is brought to grief and when justice is meted out the chapter is closed. But in your case, I believe your conduct in putting into the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicated Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused the Communist aggression in Korea with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000 Americans and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason . . .

"I feel that I must pass such sentence upon the principals of this diabolical conspiracy to destroy a God-fearing nation, which will demonstate with finality that this nation's security must remain inviolate, that traffic in military secrets, whether prompted by slavish devotion to a foreign ideology or by a desire for monetary gains, must cease."

The Supreme Court of the United States has examined the law and the record and has affirmed the sentence. Only by demonstrating that they will give their allegiance to the United States instead of Russia, which they can do by telling all they know, can the Rosenbergs save their own lives.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH AND STEWART ALSOP

Mr. Facing-Both-Ways

WASHINGTON

According to those who should know, the White House mood is increasingly uncertain and unhappy. The President shows the world a smiling face, but behind the splendidly confident facade there are growing doubts about the course he has charted. The question remains whether Eisenhower's doubts will lead to a change of the Eisenhower course.

The schism in the White House soul was very clearly revealed in the succession of speeches delivered by the President on his triumphal tour of the Midwestern and Eastern states.

On the one hand, at Minneapolis, the President delivered a sustained and closely reasoned attack on the theory of foreign policy (miscalled the "go-it-alone" theory) that Sen. Robert A. Taft has recently been developing. And at Mount Rushmore, he declared that "our foreign aid program as now conceived is indispensible to all our security arrangements" — an obvious and direct hit at the desire of the Taftites in Congress to trim the foreign aid program with a meat axe.

Also at Mount Rushmore, the President pointedly remarked that we must "guard against those who pretend to defend freedom with weapons from the arsenal of the tyrant, for to defend freedom in ways that destroy freedom is suicide." Members of the Eisenhower entourage went out of the way to disclose that this grave warning was aimed at the methods of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. Then at Dartmouth the President nobly denounced the "book burning" that has been started in the American libraries overseas at the behest of the Wisconsin senator.

Political Leadership A Problem

In short, the President made his own position very plain. On the other hand, however, the President equally plainly indicated that he had no plans, as yet, for forcing his party to accept this position of his. At Mount Rushmore, he lauded political "co-operation and harmony," and he argued that he had to get his way by "patient persuasion, friendly contact."

The theme was even more pointedly developed at Oyster Bay. There the President spoke downright defensively about this disinclination to quarrel with the Republicans who differ with him. Evidently the problem of political leadership is very much on Eisenhower's mind. It ought to be.

Only a day or so after the Mount Rushmore speech, Sen. Robert A Taft announced that he would give his strong support to the drive to cut the President's foreign aid program. Sen. Taft explained he had not fought for cuts in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee because "conditions were not right there." He added that the outlook was more favorable in the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is packed with such men as Sens. McCarthy, Mundt and McCarran.

Sen. Taft's characteristically frank declaration of war against the major item of the Eisenhower legislative program, has a meaning that cannot be overlooked. So too, has such an incident as the recent Republican State Convention in Wisconsin, which was little better than an anti-Eisenhower rally.

The hero of the meeting was Sen. McCarthy, whose portrait occupied the place of honor, high above the picture of the President himself. The villian was Wisconsin's senior senator, Alexander Wiley, who has consistently supported the President's policies in his key place as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. The whole meeting almost seemed to be designed to buyy Wiley into taking an anti-Eisenhower stand.

Wiley Supported Ike

More than half the convention delegates refused to rise in greeting to Wiley when he appeared on the platform. Great numbers of them loudly booed him when he was introduced, and there was much booing also at the close of his speech. Another speaker denounced poor Wiley by name for plotting to admit "leftist voters" to this coutry, because he has backed the President's request for revision of the McCarran Immigration Act. And at the close Wiley was formally "censured" by a resolution of the whole convention, for acceding to another Presidential request to oppose the Bricker amendment to the Constitution.

Wiley courageously and correctly reminded the Wisconsin Republicans that their party's main strength was the popularity of Dwight D. Eisenhower. The same point was dramatically demonstrated by the President's expedition to the grassroots. Vast and adoring crowds very plainly showed whom they would follow, if there had to be a choice of Republican leaders.

In these circumstances, it may seem ridiculous that the President's authority in his party, his power to lead and to decide, should be increasingly challenged. Yet the growing boldness of those Republicans who hate and oppose Eisenhower is thoroughly justified in a practical sense. The President has in effect promised his enemies that they can continue to ride on his coattails, no matter how often and how hard they kick him.

Ever-increasing attractiveness is the reward of the woman who constantly renews her interests!

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

How often do you look into your mirror and ponder, "What will make me more attractive?" It is a question every woman should ask herself often. Whenever you improve yourself you increase the pleasure of your family and friends in their association with you.

There is always a solid answer to the question of how can you be more attractive. It will be the answer as long as you live and here it is: Be your own best self. The woman who makes the most of her individual looks, personality, mental powers and talents is always attractive.

Lifelong Pursuit

Self-improvement is a lifelong pursuit and one of the most interesting that any of us can follow. The more that we develop ourselves, the more fascinating life becomes to us. A greater and broader world unfolds before our eyes as we increase the use of our potentialities.

To fulfill our potentials, all that is needed is interest and initiative. You've got your share of both. Trot them out; put them to work. You'll see your possibilities and the world around you with fresh eyes.

It will keep you looking your best, wearing your best manner and meeting the world with the most pleasant and agreeable attitude. It will draw people to you, seeking your secret of happiness. All this — just from applying renewed interest and initiative to yourself and your way of life!

Interest may lead you to a more becoming hair style, a fascinating book, a rewarding hobby or a new friend. But it is your initiative that will translate your interest into action. Initiative is just another way of saying "doing."

Charm Gains

Your most cherished goals are within reach just for this much doing: Plan on paper all the things that you have wanted to do for a long time. Write a description of precisely how you will go about accomplishing each one. For example, if you have been postponing giving a dinner party that you know you should give, start your action by plotting it on paper. Write down your guest list, menu and decorations. If it's membership in a club that you desire, list the names of the sponsors to whom you should apply. After organizing as fully as possible, jot down a time limit for the completion of each step. Then, let nothing short of catastrophe alter your course!

You'll be amazed at the progress you can make. And in a short time your appearance, poise and personality will reflect increased charm. What's more, they will increase with each new accomplishment!

YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE

You can achieve an appealing, resonant, sonorous voice—one that can be a vibrant attribute to charm and success—by reading the new booklet, YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE, which gives complete instructions on how to overcome such wearisome speaking qualities as tonelessness, dullness and lack of proper modulation. Write to Secrets of Charm in care of this newspaper, enclosing 10c in coin, plus stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tomorrow: Question-box answers.

My New York

by Mel Heimer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — If you dig far enough back into the past of Tallulah Bankhead, the Zip-what-is-it of show business, you will find that once the English thought her the world's finest dramatic actress. You will find that she knocked New York's drama critics for a loop in "The Skin of Our Teeth" and you will discover there are critics who feel she and not Jeanne Eagels was the perfect "Sadie Thompson." She was an idol of the legitimate theater — "whatever the heck that is," in her words — and she had audiences at her feet. Bored, blase, profane Tallulah.

Meditating all this, it was virtually astonishing the other night to thread my way through the tables of the darkened Copa room of the Sands Hotel back into her dressing room — and discover that, having disposed of the dinner show in skillful and successful fashion, she was shaking like two leaves. I've never seen anyone quite so nervous in my life. The business of making her night club debut, while she kidded onstage about it — "I'm just a shill for a gambling joint" — had scared her stiff and she said so in just those words. She had kicked off her shoes and was swathed in a white wrapper, and she sat there taking gulps of champagne and thanking people who kept dropping in to tell her how wonderful she was. 'You're kind," she told them, tensely, "but to tell the truth, I was lousy.

"Never in all the years I was on the stage did I ever find myself in that predicament of wondering what the next line was. But tonight I did. When I was doing that Dorothy Parker monologue, 'A Telephone Call,' my mind drew a complete blank. I did all right? I'll never know how."

This is a provocative, earthy, lusty town and it fits Tallulah Bankhead like a skintight dress. Actually — what in the name of anything was she doing here, shilling for a gambling joint? Why? She looked up candidly. If there's one thing that the Bankhead is, it's candid. She may be vulgar at times, loud at others, a lady rarely and on-key in her singing never—but she never is dull, she frequently is pleasant and she always is candid.

"For $25,000 a week, that's why," she said. Then she shook her head impatiently at herself. "No, no; it's really $20,000 — but everybody lies about those things, don't they? Anyway, I'm doing it for the money."

This, of course, is probably the only place on earth where she could make $20,000 a week in these days; even Miami Beach isn't hurling around those $15,000 salaries that guys like Milton Berle once allegedly made.

However, in Las Vegas now, the night club acts are the absolute tops in America — Joe E. Lewis, Jan Murray, Jane Powell, John Payne, Lou Holtz, and, in the recent past, Van Johnson, Ezio Pinza, et al. The answer is simple. They get five, 10, 20 thousand — and it might as easily be 50. Their function is partly to entertain, but mostly to draw in the cash customers, who, when the show is over, drift out to the wheels and the craps tables.

It was a little sad to see her work the other night. I've never been a great Bankhead fan, but she was an actress of stature and she did some good things in the theater. However, she began kicking the gong around when she did Noel Coward's classic museum piece, "Private Lives," in what amounted to burlesque, and then she slid as if on a toboggan into radio and TV and became, roughly, a clown. A good one, too.

In her saloon act here, Tallulah interrupted the risque jokes and the buck-and-winging briefly to do this serious, touching Parker monologue. She hurried through it too swiftly and she didn't do it as well as she had at rehearsal in the afternoon — but she did do it well enough to bring the saloon to swift attention, and when she was through, I just scratched my head and wondered again — why? Why here?

However, I stopped wondering, so priggishly, when I remembered that all of us — and I'm no exception — have sold our souls at one time or another. All of us but the saints, and they are, in this world of humans, only a handful indeed.

On The Line

by Bob Considine

NEW YORK (INS)—"There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good."

The English novelist Mary Ann Evans, who called herself George Eliot, wrote that.

Many years later it was to become a beacon on which Judge Irving Kaufman steadfastly held his gaze. It took great concentration and character on the judge's part, for around him swirled tornados of emotion and vivid darts of superbly contrived propaganda.

As appeals in the Rosenberg case piled on appeals, and piled again to form a legalistic labyrinth that has had no counterpart in this country since the Socco-Vanzetti case, Kaufman became a target of abuse and special pleading beyond compare. He was dramatically appealed to by racial and religious groups of all shadings, by vast and important labor and other tightly-knit organizations, by tens of thousands who decry capital punishment. He and his children were threatened anonymously.

Judge Kaufman is a sensitive man, and a good father. It was like a whip across his face that day in Federal Court when Emanuel Bloch, the Rosenberg lawyer, dropped what had been the monotone of his recapitulation of his charges against certain government witnesses, and cried out passionately:

"You have in your hands the fate of two human beings, your honor . . . You should have witnessed the scenes with the children. The Rosenbergs are soft, sweet, tender people whose hearts are no different than yours or mine . . . What is it that causes them to say 'We are innocent'? Why don't they take the easy way out and confess if they are guilty? What stops them?"

Judge Kaufman thought that over for a time before he replied.

"I have pondered that over and over," he said quietly.

"Once the current passes through the bodies of the Rosenbergs nobody can ever right the wrongs done to them, their children, and American justice," Bloch went on.

"God!—your honor—you have a heart. These are parents! They love their children as you love yours. Please think! Please consult with your conscience!

"Your honor, you will never be able to look in a mirror again, or at your children!"

That was the whip.

"If I felt that way for an instant," the judge said evenly, "I'd change."

And even the Communist stooges in the courtroom, who hissed government attorneys as they left that day, must have known in their hearts that never had a judge uttered more honest words.

"This court," Judge Kaufman said in written answer to that particular appeal of Bloch, "has no doubt but that if the Rosenbergs were ever to attain their freedom they would continue in their deep-seated devotion and allegiance to Soviet Russia, a devotion which has caused them to choose martyrdom and keep their lips sealed."

And he concluded his document with the quote from George Eliot.

He has needed more than George Eliot, of course. And utilized more.

A deeply religious man, Judge Kaufman spent long periods in his synagogue in the days leading up to the sentence he passed on the New York engineer and his prim and dumpy little wife. His was no snap judgment, but one in which he had sought the ultimate counsel.

An American returning from abroad is struck by the difference in outlook on the Rosenberg case. People I spoke to in London, Rome and Paris seemed thoroughly convinced that something was wrong with the government's case. And always for the same reason: "If they were guilty they should have been killed when sentenced . . . Why has it dragged out so long?"

Astonishingly, not many people through the world can comprehend the infinite patience and immeasurable fairness of American justice.

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

My New York

by Mel Heimer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — If you dig far enough back into the past of Tallulah Bankhead, the Zip-what-is-it of show business, you will find that once the English thought her the world's finest dramatic actress. You will find that she knocked New York's drama critics for a loop in "The Skin of Our Teeth" and you will discover there are critics who feel she and not Jeanne Eagels was the perfect "Sadie Thompson." She was an idol of the legitimate theater — "whatever the heck that is," in her words — and she had audiences at her feet. Bored, blase, profane Tallulah.

Meditating all this, it was virtually astonishing the other night to thread my way through the tables of the darkened Copa room of the Sands Hotel back into her dressing room — and discover that, having disposed of the dinner show in skillful and successful fashion, she was shaking like two leaves. I've never seen anyone quite so nervous in my life. The business of making her night club debut, while she kidded onstage about it — "I'm just a shill for a gambling joint" — had scared her stiff and she said so in just those words. She had kicked off her shoes and was swathed in a white wrapper, and she sat there taking gulps of champagne and thanking people who kept dropping in to tell her how wonderful she was. 'You're kind," she told them, tensely, "but to tell the truth, I was lousy.

"Never in all the years I was on the stage did I ever find myself in that predicament of wondering what the next line was. But tonight I did. When I was doing that Dorothy Parker monologue, 'A Telephone Call,' my mind drew a complete blank. I did all right? I'll never know how."

This is a provocative, earthy, lusty town and it fits Tallulah Bankhead like a skintight dress. Actually — what in the name of anything was she doing here, shilling for a gambling joint? Why? She looked up candidly. If there's one thing that the Bankhead is, it's candid. She may be vulgar at times, loud at others, a lady rarely and on-key in her singing never— but she never is dull, she frequently is pleasant and she always is candid.

"For $25,000 a week, that's why," she said. Then she shook her head impatiently at herself. "No, no; it's really $20,000 — but everybody lies about those things, don't they? Anyway, I'm doing it for the money."

This, of course, is probably the only place on earth where she could make $20,000 a week in these days; even Miami Beach isn't hurling around those $15,000 salaries that guys like Milton Berle once allegedly made.

However, in Las Vegas now, the night club acts are the absolute tops in America — Joe E. Lewis, Jan Murray, Jane Powell, John Payne, Lou Holtz, and, in the recent past, Van Johnson, Ezio Pinza, et al. The answer is simple. They get five, 10, 20 thousand — and it might as easily be 50. Their function is partly to entertain, but mostly to draw in the cash customers, who, when the show is over, drift out to the wheels and the craps tables.

It was a little sad to see her work the other night. I've never been a great Bankhead fan, but she was an actress of stature and she did some good things in the theater. However, she began kicking the gong around when she did Noel Coward's classic museum piece, "Private Lives," in what amounted to burlesque, and then she slid as if on a toboggan into radio and TV and became, roughly, a clown. A good one, too.

In her saloon act here, Tallulah interrupted the risque jokes and the buck-and-winging briefly to do this serious, touching Parker monologue. She hurried through it too swiftly and she didn't do it as well as she had at rehearsal in the afternoon — but she did do it well enough to bring the saloon to swift attention, and when she was through, I just scratched my head and wondered again — why? Why here?

However, I stopped wondering, so priggishly, when I remembered that all of us — and I'm no exception — have sold our souls at one time or another. All of us but the saints, and they are, in this world of humans, only a handful indeed.

On The Line

by Bob Considine

NEW YORK (INS)—"There is a mercy which is weakness, and even treason against the common good."

The English novelist Mary Ann Evans, who called herself George Eliot, wrote that.

Many years later it was to become a beacon on which Judge Irving Kaufman steadfastly held his gaze. It took great concentration and character on the judge's part, for around him swirled tornados of emotion and vivid darts of superbly contrived propaganda.

As appeals in the Rosenberg case piled on appeals, and piled again to form a legalistic labyrinth that has had no counterpart in this country since the Socco-Vanzetti case, Kaufman became a target of abuse and special pleading beyond compare. He was dramatically appealed to by racial and religious groups of all shadings, by vast and important labor and other tightly-knit organizations, by tens of thousands who decry capital punishment. He and his children were threatened anonymously.

Judge Kaufman is a sensitive man, and a good father. It was like a whip across his face that day in Federal Court when Emanuel Bloch, the Rosenberg lawyer, dropped what had been the monotone of his recapitulation of his charges against certain government witnesses, and cried out passionately:

"You have in your hands the fate of two human beings, your honor . . . You should have witnessed the scenes with the children. The Rosenbergs are soft, sweet, tender people whose hearts are no different than yours or mine . . . What is it that causes them to say 'We are innocent'? Why don't they take the easy way out and confess if they are guilty? What stops them?"

Judge Kaufman thought that over for a time before he replied.

"I have pondered that over and over," he said quietly.

"Once the current passes through the bodies of the Rosenbergs nobody can ever right the wrongs done to them, their children, and American justice," Bloch went on.

"God!—your honor—you have a heart. These are parents! They love their children as you love yours. Please think! Please consult with your conscience!

"Your honor, you will never be able to look in a mirror again, or at your children!"

That was the whip.

"If I felt that way for an instant," the judge said evenly. "I'd change."

And even the Communist stooges in the courtroom, who hissed government attorneys as they left that day, must have known in their hearts that never had a judge uttered more honest words.

"This court," Judge Kaufman said in written answer to that particular appeal of Bloch, "has no doubt but that if the Rosenbergs were ever to attain their freedom they would continue in their deep-seated devotion and allegiance to Soviet Russia, a devotion which has caused them to choose martyrdom and keep their lips sealed."

And he concluded his document with the quote from George Eliot.

He has needed more than George Eliot, of course. And utilized more.

A deeply religious man, Judge Kaufman spent long periods in his synagogue in the days leading up to the sentence he passed on the New York engineer and his prim and dumpy little wife. His was no snap judgment, but one in which he had sought the ultimate counsel.

An American returning from abroad is struck by the difference in outlook on the Rosenberg case. People I spoke to in London, Rome and Paris seemed thoroughly convinced that something was wrong with the government's case. And always for the same reason: "If they were guilty they should have been killed when sentenced . . . Why has it dragged out so long?"

Astonishingly, not many people through the world can comprehend the infinite patience and immeasurable fairness of American justice.

Hall Of Fame Gets Hans Wagner's Locker

PITTSBURGH, June 17 (AP) — Honus Wagner will be the first National League player to have his locker enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame museum.

Wagner's locker, where he used to hang his uniform as a player and coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was sent today to Cooperstown, N. Y., site of the shrine.

Although Wagner is the first National League to win this honor, three American League stars—all New York Yankees—have won it. The lockers of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe Dimaggio are on display.

Patty Beats Champ

ATLANTA, Ga., June 17 (INS)—Patty Berg, playing for her fifth Western Women's Open golf title, defeated defending champion Betsy Rawls, two-up today.

Miss Berg's second-round victory was acquired with the aid of three birdies in her 18-hole round, and despite a hole-in-one by her Spartanburg, S. C., opponent.

Miss Rawls' ace came on the 178-yard 11th hole of the capital city country club course in Atlanta. It put last year's top-money winner one-up on the fighting red-head who has been one of the leaders of feminine golf for 18 years.

$188,724 Bet On Dapper Dan Day At Fairgo

$20,232 Double Pool Tops; Mamaloi's $34 Meet's Best Payoff

Five thousand persons, the best turnout of any day this week, braved rainy weather yesterday to witness the Dapper Dan Day program at Fairgo and saw R. M. Finn's Penny Achance, a 3-year-old dark brown filly, register a two-lengths victory over Rolling Boy by two lengths in the five furlongs feature.

Ray Arduini booted home the daughter of Shiny Penny first and backers of the filly, favorite in the 7th race, received $7.60 for each $2 played on the nose.

William V. Keegan, city finance commissioner, and Dapper Dan Club representative, accepted the prize, a defense bond, in behalf of J. C. "Jimmy" Cremen, trainer of the winner. The award was presented by Al Abrams, Pittsburgh sports editor and national president of the Dapper Dans, who was introduced by Col. Nelson W. Russler.

Handle Hits $188,724

Penny Achance was the third straight favorite to score at the local half miler where wagering hit a new high for the week at $188,724. This figure bettered Monday's handle by $12,390 and exceeded Tuesday's total by $30,475 and soared the four-day total, including Saturday's high of $208,422, to $731,729. Indications are that today's betting will send the 5-day handle above the $865,434 wagered the first week last year.

Yesterday's mutuel play was $27,075 above the fourth day last year and $22,939 better than the first Wednesday of 1952.

Mike Sorrentino started off the program by riding both ends of the daily double. He had a leg up on Codac, owned by the Kentini Stable, which whipped Flying Beam by the margin of two lengths in the opener, and scored with a 10 to 1 shot in the second in which T. H. Evans' Chicle Sador outran Toussiant and Jack Tyrie. Chicle Sador returned $22 for $2.

Yanks Resume Winning Ways

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP) — The New York Yankees resumed their winning ways, after a one-day break, to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 5-3, today on the pitching of Allie Reynolds and Johnny Sain and the hitting of Billy Martin.

Reynolds, back in the starting routine after confining his work to seven relief jobs during the Yanks' 18-game winning streak that ended last night, needed help from Sain in the eighth.

It was Reynolds' sixth win and the Yanks 19th in 20 games. St. Louis, which broke the winning streak last night, now has lost 15 of its last 16.

Gov. McKeldin

TODAY is Governor's Day at Fairgo and the guest of honor will be Maryland's chief executive, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin and a party of fifteen.

Gov. McKeldin was the nominator of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the Republican convention in Chicago last year and "Ike" is now president. "Teddy," as he is called by his many friends, is known as "Mr. Republican" in Maryland.

Born in South Baltimore, Nov. 20, 1900, McKeldin is a lawyer and former mayor of the Monumental City.

The governor will present a trophy to the owner of the winner in the Col. William H. Robertson Memorial, fourth race on today's card. Col. Robertson, president of the Cumberland Contracting Company and a former director of the Cumberland Fair Association, died in 1942.

RICHARD J. "DICK" STAKEM, who knows much about the baseball history of the George's Creek section, recalls that the governor's brother, "Happy Jack" McKeldin, was Midland's catcher about 1905. The famed battery in those days when organized ball made its bow "up the creek" was Sundstrom and McKeldin, who were imported from Baltimore.

The late Thomas P. Kenny who later resided in Cumberland managed Midland at that time.

"Happy Jack" McKeldin married Annie Bowen whose parents owned the Bowen Hotel in Midland. The McKeldins lived at Midland for awhile and several of their children were born there.

James F. "Jimmy" McGuire, former Allegany County baseball leader, now of Washington, D. C., and "Happy Jack" McKeldin are brothers-in-law, having married Bowen sisters.

5,000 See Penny Achance Win Feature

$188,724 Bet On Dapper Dan Day At Fairgo

$20,232 Double Pool Tops; Mamaloi's $34 Meet's Best Payoff

Five thousand persons, the best turnout of any day this week, braved rainy weather yesterday to witness the Dapper Dan Day program at Fairgo and saw R. M. Finn's Penny Achance, a 3-year-old dark brown filly, register a two-lengths victory over Rolling Boy by two lengths in the five furlongs feature.

Ray Arduini booted home the daughter of Shiny Penny first and backers of the filly, favorite in the 7th race, received $7.60 for each $2 played on the nose.

William V. Keegan, city finance commissioner, and Dapper Dan Club representative, accepted the prize, a defense bond, in behalf of J. C. "Jimmy" Cremen, trainer of the winner. The award was presented by Al Abrams, Pittsburgh sports editor and national president of the Dapper Dans, who was introduced by Col. Nelson W. Russler.

Handle Hits $188,724

Penny Achance was the third straight favorite to score at the local half miler where wagering hit a new high for the week at $188,724. This figure bettered Monday's handle by $12,390 and exceeded Tuesday's total by $30,475 and soared the four-day total, including Saturday's high of $208,422, to $731,729. Indications are that today's betting will send the 5-day handle above the $865,434 wagered the first week last year.

Yesterday's mutuel play was $27,075 above the fourth day last year and $22,939 better than the first Wednesday of 1952.

Mike Sorrentino started off the program by riding both ends of the daily double. He had a leg up on Codac, owned by the Kentini Stable, which whipped Flying Beam by the margin of two lengths in the opener, and scored with a 10 to 1 shot in the second in which T. H. Evans' Chicle Sador outran Toussiant and Jack Tyrie. Chicle Sador returned $22 for $2.

Hall Of Fame Gets Hans Wagner's Locker

PITTSBURGH, June 17 (AP) — Honus Wagner will be the first National League player to have his locker enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame museum.

Wagner's locker, where he used to hang his uniform as a player and coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was sent today to Cooperstown, N. Y., site of the shrine.

Although Wagner is the first National League to win this honor, three American League stars—all New York Yankees—have won it. The lockers of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe Dimaggio are on display.

Patty Beats Champ

ATLANTA, Ga., June 17 (INS)—Patty Berg, playing for her fifth Western Women's Open golf title, defeated defending champion Betsy Rawls, two-up today.

Miss Berg's second-round victory was acquired with the aid of three birdies in her 18-hole round, and despite a hole-in-one by her Spartanburg, S. C., opponent.

Miss Rawls' ace came on the 178-yard 11th hole of the capital city country club course in Atlanta. It put last year's top-money winner one-up on the fighting red-head who has been one of the leaders of feminine golf for 18 years.

Washington Wins, 1-0

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Mickey Vernon singled home Ed FitzGerald from third base with two out in the ninth inning tonight to give the Washington Senators a 1-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox. WINNER—Owned by A. J. Lubin, trained by J. L. Cranford.

Rosedan, under a snug hold for the better part of a half mile, moved up willingly when let out a notch, responded to strong pressure to come around horses in the stretch turn and drew clear the final strides. Lucky Patti, under light restraint early, went up on the inside to be prominent down the backstretch, took the lead very briefly while on the inside in the early stretch, then was unable to withstand the winner. Harpist, showed good late foot to close ground. Dapper Miss gave ground through the stretch. Princess June tired, as did Sunrise Red. Ranger Mosby quit and appeared sore after the race.

Bosox Whip Tigers

BOSTON, June 17 (AP)—Red Sox righthander Willard Nixon celebrated his 25th birthday by humbling Detroit on five hits and driving in two runs today in a 17-1 victory. His Boston teammates presented him with a seven-run fourth inning and Dick Gernert chipped in with his 10th and 11th homers.

Boston walloped Starter Dick Marlowe, Earl Harrist, Hal Erickson and Ray Herbert for 20 hits for 31 total bases while assuring Nixon—now rounding into top form—of his third triumph against one defeat. The Tigers ended his scoreless inning streak at 21 by pushing across a tally in the ninth.

Yanks Resume Winning Ways

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP) — The New York Yankees resumed their winning ways, after a one-day break, to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 5-3, today on the pitching of Allie Reynolds and Johnny Sain and the hitting of Billy Martin.

Reynolds, back in the starting routine after confining his work to seven relief jobs during the Yanks' 18-game winning streak that ended last night, needed help from Sain in the eighth.

It was Reynolds' sixth win and the Yanks 19th in 20 games. St. Louis, which broke the winning streak last night, now has lost 15 of its last 16.

Fairgo Briefs

By C. V. BURNS

Gov. McKeldin

TODAY is Governor's Day at Fairgo and the guest of honor will be Maryland's chief executive, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin and a party of fifteen.

Gov. McKeldin was the nominator of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the Republican convention in Chicago last year and "Ike" is now president. "Teddy," as he is called by his many friends, is known as "Mr. Republican" in Maryland.

Born in South Baltimore, Nov. 20, 1900, McKeldin is a lawyer and former mayor of the Monumental City.

The governor will present a trophy to the owner of the winner in the Col. William H. Robertson Memorial, fourth race on today's card. Col. Robertson, president of the Cumberland Contracting Company and a former director of the Cumberland Fair Association, died in 1942.

RICHARD J. "DICK" STAKEM, who knows much about the baseball history of the George's Creek section, recalls that the governor's brother, "Happy Jack" McKeldin, was Midland's catcher about 1905. The famed battery in those days when organized ball made its bow "up the creek" was Sundstrom and McKeldin, who were imported from Baltimore.

The late Thomas P. Kenny who later resided in Cumberland managed Midland at that time.

"Happy Jack" McKeldin married Annie Bowen whose parents owned the Bowen Hotel in Midland. The McKeldins lived at Midland for awhile and several of their children were born there.

James F. "Jimmy" McGuire, former Allegany County baseball leader, now of Washington, D. C., and "Happy Jack" McKeldin are brothers-in-law, having married Bowen sisters.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, June 17 (INS) — Very true that Greer Garson's husband, Buddy Fogelson, is in Baylor Hospital in Dallas, but Greer tells me he was put there with a bad case of virus flu and not a heart attack.

"Since the doctor had Buddy in the hospital," said Greer over the long distance telephone, "he kept him there and told him to take off 30 pounds, so as not to have a recurrent heart attack. He's already lost 18 pounds. By the way, we hope to be back in Los Angeles for our fourth wedding anniversary July 15," she said.

Greer is due at MGM in late July for "Miss Baker's Dozen," in which she plays a school teacher in a boys' school.

One of the things she told me is that Buddy went to Missouri to help his father celebrate his 101st birthday. "So," said Greer, "you see long life runs in the Fogelson family and there's nothing to worry about."

I can hardly believe that the daughter of Penny Singleton and producer Bob Sparks is old enough to be making her screen debut. Yet, Dee Gee is 18-years-old and will be seen in "Son of Sinbad" at RKO.

Dee Gee's real name is Dorothy Grace, she's just as brunette as Penny is blonde, and just as eager to make a career for herself.

She'll work during the summer months and then enter Mt. St. Mary's College, where she'll major in dramatics this fall. She just graduated from Romona Convent.

The whole thing is off for MGM to star Ava Gardner and Kirk Douglas in "Ember Days," a story presenting a priest in a questionable light.

At first the MGM heads planned to beat a sure-ban from the Legion of Decency by a complete re-write job, but it is certainly not the intention of the studio to offend anyone. Sam Zambalist, the producer, is wise to cancel the whole project.

No studio, these days, wants to duplicate the trouble "The Moon Is Blue" is having with the Johnston office and the Legion of Decency. Money is too tight.

My soon-to-be neighbor, Rosemary Clooney, telephoned to say the house she's living in is rented and that the new tenants move in the 20th.

"I can't move into my new house until the 23rd. That's the date Judy Garland vacates. Perhaps she'll store my furniture there and I'll go to a hotel."

Rosemary said she's never worked so hard in her life what with her records, television shows and her picture, "Red Garters."

"But that's one good way to keep happy," said she. Jose Ferrer, she said, is in New York lecturing at Columbia University.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Maxie Rosenbloom, back with his gal, Gladys Parker, told pals at the Band Box that he and Gladys, who is the creator of the famed "Mopsy" cartoon, will be married any day.

John Wayne's two 'teen-age sons, Micha'el and Robert, join him on his location set in Mexico after school closes.

Had dinner with the Randolph Hearsts at Romanoff's before they returned to San Francisco.

Saw Lew Schrieber dining with Jane Greer and Ed Lasker. Thought 20th was probably signing Jane, but Lew said it was just a get-together.

Richard Tregaskis sat at a near-by table. He leaves for Korea next week to make a film for the government, taking with him Cameraman Kay Norton.

Kathryn Grayson had such a bad attack of sinus that Director George Sidney had to shut down the "Kiss Me, Kate" set for a day.

Robert Taylor visited the DeHavilland aircraft plant in England and had the thrill of a lifetime when he flew one of the new two engine jet Canberras. MGM didn't get the same thrill. Bob was ordered to stay on the ground, even though he is one of Hollywood's best pilots.

Burt Lancaster, who really was much sicker following his operation, than was printed, will be released from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital early next week.

Coed Is Granted Bail In Baby Slaying Case

AUGUSTA, Me., June 17 (AP) — A pretty Colby College co-ed accused of slaying her unwanted baby was granted bail yesterday an a rare exception to usual procedure in Maine murder cases.

Blonde Miss Harriet Sart, 21, of Nahant, Mass., left the County Jail shortly after her counsel provided $10,000 bail in cash at the office of the Superior Court Clerk.

Miss Sart did not appear in court during the brief proceedings and her father declined to speak with newsmen.

Most persons accused of murder in Maine have been denied bail.

But Justice Randolph A. Weatherbee ruled that Miss Sart could be released in bail for appearance at the October term of Superior Court. The judge said Maine statutes permit bail in any case where circumstances justify it.

Virginian Dies In Car Crash At T. B., Md.

T. B. Md., June 17 (AP) — Barr Harris Attaway, 41, of Norfolk, Va., was fatally injured yesterday when his car collided with another in the main intersection of this tiny Southern Maryland town.

Attaway's car spun around after the collision, Prince Georges County Police reported, and he was thrown out. Police said the car rolled over Attaway. Six other persons in Attaway's car were uninjured.

The other driver, Raymond C. Chilton, 17, of Brandywine, Md., was treated for cuts at Prince Georges General Hospital and released. He later was charged with manslaughter, failing to yield the right of way and reckless driving.

"But that's one good way to keep happy," said she. Jose Ferrer, she said, is in New York lecturing at Columbia University.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Maxie Rosenbloom, back with his gal, Gladys Parker, told pals at the Band Box that he and Gladys, who is the creator of the famed "Mopsy" cartoon, will be married any day.

John Wayne's two 'teen-age sons, Michael and Robert, join him on his location set in Mexico after school closes.

Had dinner with the Randolph Hearsts at Romanoff's before they returned to San Francisco.

Saw Lew Schrieber dining with Jane Greer and Ed Lasker. Thought 20th was probably signing Jane, but Lew said it was just a get-together.

Richard Tregaskis sat at a nearby table. He leaves for Korea next week to make a film for the government, taking with him Cameraman Kay Norton.

Kathryn Grayson had such a bad attack of sinus that Director George Sidney had to shut down the "Kiss Me, Kate" set for a day.

Robert Taylor visited the DeHavilland aircraft plant in England and had the thrill of a lifetime when he flew one of the new two engine jet Canberras. MGM didn't get the same thrill. Bob was ordered to stay on the ground, even though he is one of Hollywood's best pilots.

Burt Lancaster, who really was much sicker following his operation, than was printed, will be released from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital early next week.

Coed Is Granted Bail In Baby Slaying Case

AUGUSTA, Me., June 17 (AP) — A pretty Colby College co-ed accused of slaying her unwanted baby was granted bail yesterday an a rare exception to usual procedure in Maine murder cases.

Blonde Miss Harriet Sart, 21, of Nahant, Mass., left the County Jail shortly after her counsel provided $10,000 bail in cash at the office of the Superior Court Clerk.

Miss Sart did not appear in court during the brief proceedings and her father declined to speak with newsmen.

Most persons accused of murder in Maine have been denied bail.

But Justice Randolph A. Weatherbee ruled that Miss Sart could be released in bail for appearance at the October term of Superior Court. The judge said Maine statutes permit bail in any case where circumstances justify it.

Gas Company Checking Homes

The C&A Gas Company is conducting its regular systematic inspection of homes and schools in this section, C. A. Robbins, district manager, reported yesterday.

Each summer every school in the Allegany and Garrett Counties and in the section of West Virginia the firm serves undergoes a thorough safety check.

Each service line, each appliance is checked and a pressure test is placed on the pipes inside the structure.

Currently in Cumberland a crew is checking homes in the Johnson Heights section. In addition to inspecting the service line from the curb to the meter, an air test is also placed on the pipes inside the home.

Robbins emphasized this program which is going on at all times is for the safety of the consumers.

From one to three crews are busy at this job at all times and in the district covered by the gas company from seven to eight crews are doing this type of work, he said.

In Cumberland, there is leakage inspection being carried out continuously in the streets.

Gasoline Retail Prices Increased At Service Stations

An increase of from eight-tenths to one cent a gallon for gasoline has become effective at a number of local service stations and most others are expected to follow suit by the end of the week.

The increase came from the refineries. This means regular gas will be selling for 29.7 cents and 30 cents; and premium or "high test" at 32 and 33, depending on the brand.

Dealers pointed out this is only the second actual price increase in the past eight years. They added that eight cents of the total cost is federal and state taxes.

Esso Average .6 Cents

Esso Standard Oil Company revealed it was raising prices effective last Monday at the wholesale level, with an average increase of .6 cent for the division.

However, in Allegany County the rise amounted to .8 cent and one dealer reported an additional two-tenths cents was added to make the boost here a penny. Esso "regular" is selling for 30 cents a gallon and "high test" at 32 cents, he said.

One Amoco (American) dealer said the refinery increased his product .8 cent a gallon, the amount which will be passed along to the consumer. Amoco sells for 30 cents a gallon for regular and 33 cents for premium, he added. Shell, also up .8 cent, costs 29.7 for regular and 31.7 for premium.

Several local stations including Gulf, Texaco, Sunoco and Red Head, said they had not been notified by home offices of the increase. But, spokesmen added, when one refinery ups its price, others follow suit. A Gulf Oil operator said he expected word today.

Nears 1929 Cost

One dealer reported the increase brings "modern" gasoline within shouting distance of the 35 cents a gallon which motorists paid in 1929.

C. A. Newland, division manager of Esso Standard Oil, said there had been no general revision of gasoline prices in this area for almost three years. Since the present price schedule was put into effect in mid-1950, overall costs have been increased by substantial advances in wages, salaries and higher prices paid for materials used for construction and maintenance, he added.

Newland also stated that in recent years top-quality gasolines have become in tight supply and there have been general advances in gasoline prices in the primary market.

Newland, in noting that the average increase would be .6 cent, said the advance in Baltimore is .5 cent; Washington .6 cent and in Wilmington, Del., .6 cent.

Ex-GI's Accused Slayer In Stupor

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP) — The mother and sister of a soldier accused of murder came here today from Arkansas to try to rouse him from a stupor doctors say he's been in since the murder charge was filed.

Doctors term the condition of Sgt. Richard M. Elkins "acute psychosis". They said the 26-year-old sergeant, stationed at nearby Ft. Holabird, has been silent and "does not respond to anything we do or say."

Elkins was arrested last week at Danville, Va., along with Eric Preston Randall, Baltimore youth. Both are charged with murder in the fatal shooting of John Metzger.

A preliminary hearing for Randall has been set for tomorrow afternoon before Magistrate John J. Caslin in Towson.

The body of Metzger, 23-year-old Army veteran, was found June 4 in a clump of trees in the Southwest Baltimore area. No motive for the killing has been established.

Elkins attempted suicide at Danville, police said, by slashing his throat with a belt buckle while in a jail cell.

Mate's Fatal Shooting Accident, Wife Says

ELKTON, Md., June 17 (AP) — A young caretaker was shot and killed early today, and police were questioning his 21-year-old wife who told them the shooting was an accident.

Killed by a shot in the throat was Philip Gray, 25-year-old caretaker at the Charter Hall Lodge, a hunting club. Sheriff Nathan Kaplan and State's Attorney Albert J. Roney said Mrs. Gray was being held for investigation.

Mrs. Gray told authorities she got an anonymous telephone call last night that her husband was in trouble in an Elkton pool room.

Mrs. Gray said she left her six-year-old daughter asleep and took a .38 caliber revolver, cocking it because there had been a number of robberies recently in the neighborhood.

She said on the way to town she met a car with her husband and three companions and the men got out. The gun went off. Gray grabbed his throat saying "I'm shot."

Mineral Farmers May Apply For Wheat Allotment

Should Contact PMA Before June 25

KEYSER—A recent wheat survey conducted in Mineral County by the Production and Marketing Administration at the request of Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson, discloses that during the three years covered by the survey, 1951-53, wheat was grown in one or more of these years on at least 218 farms.

From the data obtained during the wheat survey or furnished later, wheat acreage allotments will probably be established in Mineral County for 1954.

Farmers who reported no wheat acreage for 1951, '52 or '53, but who expect to seed wheat this fall for the 1954 harvest, can be considered for a 1954 wheat acreage allotment if they will contact the county Production and Marketing Agency office in Keyser before June 25.

This also is true for any farmer, not contacted during the survey, who expects to seed wheat this fall for the first time since the fall of 1950.

Mineral County farmers who harvested wheat in 1951, or '52, or who will harvest wheat this year and who were missed in the Wheat Survey, can also be considered for 1954 wheat acreage allotments if they will report to the County PMA office on North Davis Street by June 25.

Recent information received causes the belief that wheat acreage allotments will be required by the USDA for 1954 because of an impending wheat surplus and in order to continue government price support to the nation's wheat growers.

KEYSER—A recent wheat survey conducted in Mineral County by the Production and Marketing Administration at the request of Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson, discloses that during the three years covered by the survey, 1951-53, wheat was grown in one or more of these years on at least 218 farms.

From the data obtained during the wheat survey or furnished later, wheat acreage allotments will probably be established in Mineral County for 1954.

Farmers who reported no wheat acreage for 1951, '52 or '53, but who expect to seed wheat this fall for the 1954 harvest, can be considered for a 1954 wheat acreage allotment if they will contact the county Production and Marketing Agency office in Keyser before June 25.

This also is true for any farmer, not contacted during the survey, who expects to seed wheat this fall for the first time since the fall of 1950.

Mineral County farmers who harvested wheat in 1951, or '52, or who will harvest wheat this year and who were missed in the Wheat Survey, can also be considered for 1954 wheat acreage allotments if they will report to the County PMA office on North Davis Street by June 25.

Recent information received causes the belief that wheat acreage allotments will be required by the USDA for 1954 because of an impending wheat surplus and in order to continue government price support to the nation's wheat growers.

Bishop Powell To Visit St. John's Sunday Night

FROSTBURG—Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, D.D., Bishop of Maryland, will make his annual visitation to St. John's Episcopal Church Sunday, at 7:30 p. m.

At this evening service Bishop Powell will administer the ancient and apostolic sacrament of confirmation. Confirmation is the rite wherein a person receives the strengthening gifts of the Holy Spirit.

The Biblical authority for confirmation is read at the beginning of the service, and is taken from the eighth chapter of the book of Acts, where we are told that Christians in Samaria had been baptized, but that they had not received the Holy Ghost, so the apostles sent St. Peter and St. John, who laid hands on them and they received the Holy Ghost.

Bishop Powell will also preach the sermon. The rector, Rev. Charles I. Kratz, Jr., will present the candidates for confirmation.

Among those eligible for confirmation are Mrs. James Williams, Mrs. William Ogilvie, Mrs. Gerald Middleton, Louis Aldridge, Larry James, Norma Festerman, Rance Skidmore, Mary Jane Muir and Jackie Parker.

Bishop Powell To Visit St. John's Sunday Night

Will Administer Confirmation Rite

FROSTBURG—Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, D.D., Bishop of Maryland, will make his annual visitation to St. John's Episcopal Church Sunday, at 7:30 p. m.

At this evening service Bishop Powell will administer the ancient and apostolic sacrament of confirmation. Confirmation is the rite wherein a person receives the strengthening gifts of the Holy Spirit.

The Biblical authority for confirmation is read at the beginning of the service, and is taken from the eighth chapter of the book of Acts, where we are told that Christians in Samaria had been baptized, but that they had not received the Holy Ghost, so the apostles sent St. Peter and St. John, who laid hands on them and they received the Holy Ghost.

Bishop Powell will also preach the sermon. The rector, Rev. Charles I. Kratz, Jr., will present the candidates for confirmation.

Among those eligible for confirmation are Mrs. James Williams, Mrs. William Ogilvie, Mrs. Gerald Middleton, Louis Aldridge, Larry James, Norma Festerman, Rance Skidmore, Mary Jane Muir and Jackie Parker.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

BOTH SIDES BID IDEALLY

DEALS sometimes present each side as having good suit-length and good enough fits in two suits. When that is so, the bidding nearly always proceeds to a fairly high point, either slam or just beneath it. In the closing stages, the stronger side finds itself comparing the probable gain from one action against the profit from another move. The weaker side at the same time weighs the likely loss from one alternative against the loss promised by the other option available. In some neat cases, you find both sides judging exactly what is best for them and acting accordingly.

Both sides got out their mental adding machines during the late stages of that fine bidding. Each player knew he could depend on the reliability of the messages from his favorite partner. Even then there was a set of close questions to measure.

South reckoned that the 5-Clubs bid, an obvious sacrifice, could be defeated two tricks for a score of 500. But that might prove a bad score on this tournament deal if other North-South pairs could bid and make 5-Hearts, or even 5-Diamonds. So he assayed his partner's hand in support of his own. He reckoned his partner for a probable spade honor, reducing his side's loss to a single trick in that suit. Then he estimated that only one trick would be lost in the red suits. Therefore 5-Hearts should be makeable and he bid it.

The figuring was right except that two spades were lost instead of one. But then North had just enough additional in the red suits so that nothing had to be dropped in them. South's final bid therefore paid off.

East and West meanwhile compared possible losses. Either 5-Clubs or 4-Spades could be set two tricks by impeccable defense, so the club sacrifice was not too costly. But 5-Spades or 6-Clubs would have been too expensive, going down three.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

BOTH SIDES BID IDEALLY

DEALS sometimes present each side as having good suit-length and good enough fits in two suits. When that is so, the bidding nearly always proceeds to a fairly high point, either slam or just beneath it. In the closing stages, the stronger side finds itself comparing the probable gain from one action against the profit from another move. The weaker side at the same time weighs the likely loss from one alternative against the loss promised by the other option available. In some neat cases, you find both sides judging exactly what is best for them and acting accordingly.

Both sides got out their mental adding machines during the late stages of that fine bidding. Each player knew he could depend on the reliability of the messages from his favorite partner. Even then there was a set of close questions to measure.

South reckoned that the 5-Clubs bid, an obvious sacrifice, could be defeated two tricks for a score of 500. But that might prove a bad score on this tournament deal if other North-South pairs could bid and make 5-Hearts, or even 5-Diamonds. So he assayed his partner's hand in support of his own. He reckoned his partner for a probable spade honor, reducing his side's loss to a single trick in that suit. Then he estimated that only one trick would be lost in the red suits. Therefore 5-Hearts should be makeable and he bid it.

The figuring was right except that two spades were lost instead of one. But then North had just enough additional in the red suits so that nothing had to be dropped in them. South's final bid therefore paid off.

East and West meanwhile compared possible losses. Either 5-Clubs or 4-Spades could be set two tricks by impeccable defense, so the club sacrifice was not too costly. But 5-Spades or 6-Clubs would have been too expensive, going down three.

If the defenders do not lead a diamond at any time, what play may South build to make 4-Spades?

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

Q J O C U P Q J R Z U P N F E Z E N V C B Z L P Q J U P C P J U R J F Z L Q X U P X R J — R C K C N V C M.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: OH SOME ARE FOND OF SPANISH WINE AND SOME ARE FOND OF FRENCH—MASEFIELD.

Episcopalians Attend Pageant

FREDERICK, June 17 (AP)—Delegates to the annual conference of the Washington Province of the Episcopal church attended a pageant tonight following another day of seminar workshops.

The pageant, "The Ancestry of the English Bible," is in the form of tableaux. It will be narrated by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel of Washington, wife of the convention's chaplain.

Religious music related to episodes depicted in the various scenes will be played during the pageant.

The week-long meeting of more than 450 delegates extends through Friday. Officers will be elected tomorrow.

Last night the Rt. Rev. William Crittenden, bishop of Erie, Pa., told the group that Christian people should "speak out in witness to counteract witch-hunting."

He said Episcopalians should join in a program of community action. He also advocated closer cooperation of the Episcopal Church with the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Obtains Permit To Build House

Charles W. Redinger has obtained a building permit from the city engineer's office to erect a one-story dwelling 30 by 40 feet constructed of concrete block foundation with brick walls and asphalt shingle roofing on Brookfield Avenue. The cost of the dwelling is estimated at $5,000.

Stock Markt Scores Best Advance In Nearly Month

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP) — The Stock Market scored its best advance in nearly a month today as a broad rally carried many shares up 1 to 2 points or more.

Some wide-moving stocks jumped 4 or 5 points as railroad and oil shares took the lead in a recovery movement. Advances of a point or better were made by chemical, electrical equipment, aircraft, television, rubber and copper stocks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks climbed $1.40 to $105.70. It rose the same amount on May 20. The A. P. industrial average was up $1.70 at $136.90, the rail average up $1.60 at $84.80 and the utility average up 50 cents at $51.

Volume was 1,150,000 shares, compared with 1,370,000 yesterday, when the market tested its lows of the year and then turned upward.

The report that a truce line had been agreed upon in Korea reached Wall Street when the advance was well started. Most analysts said a Korean truce would provide a boost for share prices.

Among the larger gainers today, were Texas Pacific Land Trust, which rose 5 points to 124; Skelly Oil, up 3½ at 78; General American Transportation, ahead 3 at 67 ½; Phillips Petroleum, up 2 at 54¾; International Business Machines, ahead 3 at 231; Seaboard Oil, up 2¼ at 82¾; and Pan-American Petroleum, up 4½ at 51½.

Pacific Western oil was the most active issue, advancing 1⅞ to 43⅛ on 25,200 shares. Baltimore & Ohio was up 1 at 24¼ on 12,700.

Advances outnumbered declines, 674 to 161. Issues traded totaled 1,053, against 1,131 yesterday. There were three new highs and 69 new lows.

winners for the third straight day to zoom his total points to 57 for the session. The New York saddlesmith came home first with Rosalie K, winner in the fifth to complete his riding triple and his ninth win of the meeting. The record for a 10-day session here is 22 wins established by Carson Kirk in 1943. Willie Clark who rode four seconds and two thirds yesterday now holds the runner-up spot with 28 tallies, just 29 points off the pace.

The winning 8-1 combination paid off to the tune of $117 and the double pool of $20,232 was the best of the meeting, including Saturday's $19,642.

Clark's riding, incidentally, was responsible for L. E. Torreyson taking over first place in the race for the prize that goes annually to the leading trainer. Rosedan annexed the final and paid a $9.00 mutuel.

Eleven favorites have won in the 32 races staged here in four days.

Episcopalians Attend Pageant

FREDERICK, June 17 (AP)—Delegates to the annual conference of the Washington Province of the Episcopal church attended a pageant tonight following another day of seminar workshops.

The pageant, "The Ancestry of the English Bible," is in the form of tableaux. It will be narrated by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel of Washington, wife of the convention's chaplain.

Religious music related to episodes depicted in the various scenes will be played during the pageant.

The week-long meeting of more than 450 delegates extends through Friday. Officers will be elected tomorrow.

Last night the Rt. Rev. William Crittenden, bishop of Erie, Pa., told the group that Christian people should "speak out in witness to counteract witch-hunting."

He said Episcopalians should join in a program of community action. He also advocated closer cooperation of the Episcopal Church with the World Council of Churches and the National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Obtains Permit To Build House

Charles W. Redinger has obtained a building permit from the city engineer's office to erect a one-story dwelling 30 by 40 feet constructed of concrete block foundation with brick walls and asphalt shingle roofing on Brookfield Avenue. The cost of the dwelling is estimated at $5,000.

Stock Markt Scores Best Advance In Nearly Month

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP) — The Stock Market scored its best advance in nearly a month today as a broad rally carried many shares up 1 to 2 points or more.

Some wide-moving stocks jumped 4 or 5 points as railroad and oil shares took the lead in a recovery movement. Advances of a point or better were made by chemical, electrical equipment, aircraft, television, rubber and copper stocks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks climbed $1.40 to $105.70. It rose the same amount on May 20. The A. P. industrial average was up $1.70 at $136.90, the rail average up $1.60 at $84.80 and the utility average up 50 cents at $51.

Volume was 1,150,000 shares, compared with 1,370,000 yesterday, when the market tested its lows of the year and then turned upward.

The report that a truce line had been agreed upon in Korea reached Wall Street when the advance was well started. Most analysts said a Korean truce would provide a boost for share prices.

Among the larger gainers today, were Texas Pacific Land Trust, which rose 5 points to 124; Skelly Oil, up 3½ at 78; General American Transportation, ahead 3 at 67½; Phillips Petroleum, up 2 at 54¾; International Business Machines, ahead 3 at 231; Seaboard Oil, up 2¼ at 82¾; and Pan-American Petroleum, up 4½ at 51½.

Advances outnumbered declines, 674 to 161. Issues traded totaled 1,053, against 1,131 yesterday. There were three new highs and 69 new lows.

Local Man Posts $1,000 Bond In Tractor Theft

Sheriff Muir Files Suit Against Dealer

A local man, sought by authorities for nearly a year for theft of a tractor from Sheriff Edward R. Muir, yesterday in Trial Magistrate Court waived preliminary hearing and posted $1,000 bond for his appearance in the next term of circuit court.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said Gerald E. Atkinson, RFD 3, Christie Road, broke a padlock of a building housing the tractor which was then (September, 1951) legally in the the possession of Sheriff Muir under attachment.

Lilya added that Atkinson later traded the tractor for an auto from a local dealer and left the county. After a warrant was issued, Lilya learned that the defendant was in a hospital in New York and teletyped a "pickup" to New York authorities. Police traced Atkinson to a New York address and the local man was returned here last week.

Meanwhile Sheriff Muir last month filed a $1,000 suit charging the tractor while in his possession was stolen and sold.

Filed by Attorney Edward J. Ryan, the suit names Herbert M. Wilson, North Mechanic Street auto dealer as defendant because he allegedly accepted the tractor in part payment for an automobile purchased from him.

Muir stated in his declaration that the tractor was first attached July 24, 1951. Subsequently in November 1951, a judgement of condemnation was obtained in Circuit Court by Clarence O. Atkinson against Gerald Atkinson and the tractor in question for $600 and interest.

Muir then stated that while the tractor was legally in his possession it was stolen by Gerald E. Atkinson and sold to Wilson who should have known that Atkinson had no legal title to it. Since then Wilson has disposed of the tractor and as a consequence is liable for the $600 plus interest, the sheriff added.

Housing Shortage?

Baffled employes at the Cumberland Cement and Supply Company's sand yard on Cumberland Street behind the Algonquin Hotel discovered this mother robin and family (above, feeding baby) living in the huge boom of the company's power shovel (arrow, right). Since the boom is in almost constant motion every weekday, employes theorized that the bird started her nest when the shovel was idle over a weekend, then decided not to move when work resumed. So far, the robin family has suffered no casualties.

Residents Will Be Given Chance To Appear On TV

Residents of Cumberland will be given an opportunity to see and hear themselves on television during a two-day demonstration scheduled next week by the Potomac Valley Television Company, Inc.

J. Holland Rannells, president of the company, last night said that during certain hours on June 25-26 residents will be able to walk through the office, 100 South Liberty Street, be televised and at the same time be seen on a number of sets which will be installed on the first floor.

Plans are also underway to have a second demonstration at the company's Irons Mountain antenna location and residents will be seen and heard at any of the city cable TV installations. Hours of the two demonstrations will be announced later.

Rannells said he hopes to have Mayor Roy W. Eves and other city officials on the demonstrations at which time the latest type television camera equipment of DuMont Laboratories, Inc., will be used.

Expected to operate the camera is Donald A. Stewart, distribution manager, television transmitter division of DuMont with laboratories in Clifton, N. J.

During the first year of the operation of WDTV, Stewart was manager of the station, Rannells noted. Similar telecasts have been made at four state fairs with a crowd of 131,000 in attendance at one of them.

Rec Department Works To Build Bleachers

The city's recreation department crew is working to build additional bleachers at several of its baseball-softball playing fields, Rec Director Robert E. Pence said yesterday.

Because of the size of crowds attending girls and boys softball games and area sandlot baseball attractions an additional 100 bleacher seats will be erected at Stitcher Field, he stated, and approximately 75 to 100 seats will be completed soom at Community Ball Park.

Also in progress at the present time is repair work on playground toilet facilities which are being readied for the opening of the city's playgrounds Monday.

Local Youths Sentenced In Larceny Cases

Three local youths were given sentences yesterday in Allegany County Juvenile Court in connection with a wave of thefts and vandalism which occurred here in the past several months.

Although five boys were arrested by local authorities, only three boys were sentenced. Cases against the other two youths were dismissed by Magistrate Alban C. Thompson.

Sentenced was a 16-year-old boy who was sent to the Maryland Training School for Boys, while two other youths received suspended sentences and were put on probation for two years on condition their parents make restitution for thefts and damage to property. Parents of the boys were summoned and appeared at yesterday's hearings.

Authorities said the boys admitted a number of larceny cases, theft of pocketbooks from Constitution Park, and auto accessories from Whetsell's Garage, 120 North Centre Street.

Detective Lt. James E. Van reported the youths took $700 worth of jewelry from a car at the Holland Esso Service Station, Bedford and North Mechanic Streets. The station was closed and the auto locked when the theft occurred.

Also involved was the destruction of property at an unused Wallace Street building formerly occupied by North Cumberland Assembly of God Church. Damage amounted to about $100, police said.

Lt. Van added officers learned the boys had been stealing and selling articles over a period of several months in order to obtain spending money.

In another case yesterday in Juvenile Court, a local father of four children was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction on charges of neglect and contributing to the delinquency of his minor children.

The children are being suported by the county welfare board.

The firm, which has been open for business this week, will give away plastic garment bags to all customers who bring in coats, dresses or suits.

Local Man Posts $1,000 Bond In Tractor Theft

Sheriff Muir Files Suit Against Dealer

A local man, sought by authorities for nearly a year for theft of a tractor from Sheriff Edward R. Muir, yesterday in Trial Magistrate Court waived preliminary hearing and posted $1,000 bond for his appearance in the next term of circuit court.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said Gerald E. Atkinson, RFD 3, Christie Road, broke a padlock of a building housing the tractor which was then (September, 1951) legally in the the possession of Sheriff Muir under attachment.

Lilya added that Atkinson later traded the tractor for an auto from a local dealer and left the county. After a warrant was issued, Lilya learned that the defendant was in a hospital in New York and teletyped a "pickup" to New York authorities. Police traced Atkinson to a New York address and the local man was returned here last week.

Meanwhile Sheriff Muir last month filed a $1,000 suit charging the tractor while in his possession was stolen and sold.

Filed by Attorney Edward J. Ryan, the suit names Herbert M. Wilson, North Mechanic Street auto dealer as defendant because he allegedly accepted the tractor in part payment for an automobile purchased from him.

Muir stated in his declaration that the tractor was first attached July 24, 1951. Subsequently in November 1951, a judgement of condemnation was obtained in Circuit Court by Clarence O. Atkinson against Gerald Atkinson and the tractor in question for $600 and interest.

Muir then stated that while the tractor was legally in his possession it was stolen by Gerald E. Atkinson and sold to Wilson who should have known that Atkinson had no legal title to it. Since then Wilson has disposed of the tractor and as a consequence is liable for the $600 plus interest, the sheriff added.
